Acknowledgments

Preparing this book for publication concludes with the pleasant task of thanking those who helped to bring it to fruition. Colleagues, both Canadian and American, have read and commented upon drafts of this work at various stages in its development. Among Canadian scholars, I am grateful to Professors Roger Savory, Ronald Sweet, John Revell, and Michael Marmura of the University of Toronto and to Professor Charles Adams of McGill University.

American colleagues to whom I owe a debt of gratitude include Professors Gerhard Böwering, Yale University; Yvonne Haddad, University of Massachusetts at Amherst; Frederick Denny, University of Colorado at Boulder; John Esposito, College of the Holy Cross; and Michael Carter, New York University.

Institutional support has been provided by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, the Emory University Research Fund and the librarians of Robarts Library at the University of Toronto, the Pontificio Istituto di Studi Arabi e d'Islamistica, and the Pitts Theology Library of Emory University. Alif: Journal of Comparative Poetics has graciously granted permission for reproduction of material from my article "Ibn al-Jawzī's Exegetical Propaedeutic: Introduction and Translation," Alif 8 (1988): 101–13.

I am particularly grateful to Dean Jim L. Waits of the Candler School of Theology for his persistent encouragement and support and to my colleagues at Candler, especially Professor Hendrikus Boers, who sustain an academic environment of warm collegiality and who ask good questions.

Finally, I would like to offer heartfelt thanks to the man who introduced me to the field of Islamic studies, who directed this work in its early stages, and whom I esteem as an epitome of elegant and incisive scholarship, University Professor Emeritus George Michael Wickens of the University of Toronto.
