ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The stimulus to undertake this project has come from my colleagues in the French Department at Cambridge and in Girton College, without whose starry achievements it would never have occurred to me to write a book. I also owe a great deal to the many gifted students I have been lucky enough to talk with over the last few years. A major part of the book was written while I was on sabbatical leave, which gives me more pragmatic grounds for thanking the University and Girton College. I have importuned a number of people with drafts in various stages of completion, and I should like to record my thanks for their help, patience and advice to Colin Davis, Liz Guild, Ruth Harvey, Tony Hasler, Bonnie Krueger, Toril Moi, Linda Paterson, Naomi Segal, Tony Spearing, Nicolette Zeeman, and also to John Marshall who has illumined some of the textual difficulties for me. My warmest thanks go to my colleague Simon Gaunt for his help, learning and encouragement throughout.
