List of Figures and Tables	page viii
Preface	ix
Introduction	1
Chapter 1. A philosophy of general theoretical sociology	9
1.1. Introduction	9
1.2. General theoretical sociology as a comprehensive research tradition	10
1.3. Theory structure	16
1.3.1. A positivist model: mathematical axiomatics	16
1.3.2. An instrumentalist model: meaning hierarchy	24
1.3.3. An integrated model: meaning control hierarchy with embedded optional axiomatics	26
1.3.4. Comments on discussions of theory structure in sociology	36
1.4. Theoretical explanation	36
1.4.1. A positivist model	37
1.4.2. A realist model	39
1.4.3. An integrated model	43
1.5. The process worldview	47
1.6. Three issues	53
1.6.1. The first issue: the natural science model	53
1.6.2. The second issue: the cognitive status of theories	55
1.6.3. The third issue: models	57
1.7. Summary	59
Chapter 2. Dynamical social systems and the key problems	62
2.1. Introduction	62
2.2. The systems idea in theoretical sociology	63
2.3. Dynamical systems: abstract sketch	70

Contents

2.4. Equilibrium and adjustment	81
2.5. Four types of theorems	87
2.6. Pareto and general theoretical sociology	90
2.7. Homans and the human group as a system	96
2.8. General dynamical social systems and types of social structure theorems	102
2.9. Example: four social structure theorems	120
2.10. Nonlinear dynamics, causal explanation, and functional analysis	129
2.10.1. Nonlinear social dynamics	129
2.10.2. On explanation and functional analysis	133
2.11. Complexity, action theory, and structuralism	139
2.12. Summary	150
 Chapter 3. Action theory and social order	 153
3.1. Introduction	153
3.2. Analytical action theory: the control principle of action	159
3.2.1. Interpreting Parsons dynamically	159
3.2.2. A dynamical normative control system model	161
3.2.3. Application to presuppositions of analytical action theory	167
3.2.4. A mathematical treatment	169
3.2.5. Cybernetic hierarchy models	172
3.2.6. Implications for basic theory	176
3.3. Analytical action theory: dynamical system sketches	179
3.3.1. The general dynamical social action system	182
3.3.2. Action and order implications	184
3.3.3. Interpenetration and action theory	191
3.3.4. Critical discussion	192
3.3.5. Analytical perspectives on action and order	195
3.4. Interpretive sociology and structural–generative action theory	197
3.4.1. Elements of interpretive sociology	198
3.4.2. Toward a formalization of interpretive sociology	201
3.4.3. Analytical action theory revisited	214
3.5. Adaptively rational action	218
3.5.1. Methodological individualism	220
3.5.2. Adaptive rationality I: dynamic utility	221
3.5.3. Adaptive rationality II: the behavioral model	222

3.5.4. Adaptive rationality III: the Durkheimian issue	223
3.6. Adaptively rational action: behavioral models and theoretical procedures	225
3.6.1. An adaptive behavior model	225
3.6.2. The coupling procedure	233
3.6.3. Computer-assisted analysis of theoretical models: an example for the iterated Prisoner's Dilemma	241
3.7. Concluding discussion	249
Chapter 4. Structuralism and unification	255
4.1. Introduction	255
4.2. Biased networks: diffusion in a social structure	264
4.3. Theoretical significance of biased networks and diffusion processes	271
4.4. The strength of weak ties and the dilemma of integration	275
4.5. Related formal theory in the social networks tradition	278
4.6. Macrostructuralism	283
4.6.1. Introduction to macrostructural theory	284
4.6.2. Formalization of macrostructural theory: I	288
4.6.3. Formalization of macrostructural theory: II	295
4.6.4. Discussion	302
4.7. Unification of macrostructural theory and the weak-ties model	306
4.8. Small worlds: an application of the unified theory	313
4.9. Generativity via E -state structuralism	320
4.9.1. Formulation and application of the theoretical procedure	323
4.9.2. Summary	333
4.9.3. Toward further developments	335
