

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
List of Illustrations	ix
1 Sport and Drama: the Uneasy Playmates	1
Sport versus drama: twentieth-century perspectives	1
Sport and drama: the historical background to 1788	5
The hippodrama in Australia	8
Imagining a sporting society	15
2 The Sport and Drama Industry 1788–1930	21
The sport and drama timetable	22
Celebrating sport in theatre	27
The theatre as sports arena and the athlete as actor	38
The sport and drama entrepreneurs	43
Displacements and divisions: gender, class, and work	47
National achievement: sports men and stage women	56
3 The First Sporting Dramas 1866–80	61
Dion Boucicault's Flying Scud (1866)	61
Other early sporting plays	85
4 The Golden Age of Sporting Melodrama 1880–1910	93
Constructing the paradigm	93
Bland Holt and New Babylon (1880)	98
Dion Boucicault's The Jilt (1885)	102
'A stupendous mass of horse'	105
Treadmills, bicycles, and moving pictures	111
From race to chase: capitalism unmasked	117
5 The Australian Sporting Play on the Commercial Stage	122
Nationalising the signs of sporting drama	122
Localisations: the nation as mirror	127
Rewritings: revising the ideology	141
Rejections: An Englishman's Home (1909) and Australian chauvinist war plays	149
No place for sport: the Australian bush comedies	154
The sporting utopia	155

6	Sport in Australian Film	159
	Bricolage/montage: from theatre to film	159
	Sport, war and the bush	166
	Victory: breeding, science and luck, or skill and effort?	170
	Parody dramas	176
	Gender representation/representations: better a horse than a woman	180
7	Sport in the Literary Drama 1909–89	186
	Countertexts: 1909–68	189
	National mediations: 1968–80	199
	Exit sport: feminist, black and multicultural Australia 1980–1989	206
	Notes	210
	Bibliography	238
	Index	254