Acknowledgments

We began work on this volume in 1988 with the fervor of encyclopedists. The very nature of the acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS) epidemic invites critical inquiry into—and from—so many branches of human learning that no less an effort seemed justified. Many individuals thoughtfully challenged us to expand the scope of our effort: Barry Adam, Dan Beauchamp, Jeanne Brooks-Gunn, John D’Emilio, Don DesJarlais, Richard Dunne, Zillah Eisenstein, Miriam Fine, Alexander Forger, Ronald Frankenberg, Samuel Friedman and his colleagues at Narcotic and Drug Research, Inc., Frank Furstenberg, Jr., John Gagnon, Bert Hansen, Gregory Herek, Evelyn Fox Keller, John Martin, Cliff Morrison, Gerald Oppenheimer, Robert Padgug, Monroe Price, Lillian Rubin, Nancy Scheper-Hughes, Claire Sterk, Steven Tipton, Paula Treichler, and Etienne van de Walle.

Difficult choices had to be made; the fruits of this initial selection were published as supplements to The Milbank Quarterly in 1990. Further changes—additions, revisions, and updates—led to the current volume.

Two persons who have remained characteristically modest and anonymous, but without whom this volume could not have been completed, merit our special thanks: Clive E. Driver and Norman L. Wiltsie.
