CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-42214-7 - The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence
Ervin Staub
Table of Contents
More information

Contents

Preface page xiii
Acknowledgments xvii

Part I Psychological and cultural bases of genocide and other forms of group violence

1 An introduction 3
The approach and content of the book 4
A brief preview · Differences and similarities and the selection of cases
The definitions of genocide and mass killing 7
Four mass killings/genocides 8
The Holocaust · The genocide of the Armenians · The autogenocide (Khmer killing Khmer) in Cambodia · The disappearances in Argentina · Is mass killing ever justified?

2 The origins of genocide and mass killing: core concepts 13
A conception of the origins of genocide and mass killing 13
Difficult life conditions · Psychological consequences: needs and goals · Ways of coping and fulfilling needs and goals · The continuum of destruction · Cultural-societal characteristics · The role of bystanders · The role of motivation
Leadership and followership 23
The individual and the system 24
The roots of evil 25
Groups as evil or good
Comparison of personal (and social) goal theory and other approaches 28
Compartmentalization of functions and euphemistic language ·

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-42214-7 - The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence
Ervin Staub
Table of Contents
More information

Obedience to authority and the authoritarianism of culture · Psychosocial consequences of World War I on German youth · Anti-Semitism in Germany · The role of the family · Hitler's personality and psychopathology · The role of victims · Complex analyses of the origins of the Holocaust · Some further comparisons
Summary: a conception of motivation and evolution 33

3 The psychology of hard times: the effects of difficult life conditions 35
Motivations arising from threat, frustration, or difficult life conditions 36
Motivational sources of human behavior · Motivations for aggression: psychological states and processes that promote aggression · Difficult life conditions and aggression
The effect of stress and danger on psychological experience 44
The long-term effects of combat experience
Strategies for coping and goal satisfaction 48

4 Cultural and individual characteristics 51
The influence of culture 51
Aggressiveness as a persistent behavioral mode · Cultural self-concept, self-esteem, and world view · Cultural goals and values · Moral value orientations · Ingroup–outgroup differentiation and devaluation of outgroups · Pluralistic and monolithic cultures · Orientation to authority · Unconscious motivation – individual and cultural
The influence of sociopolitical organization 65
Governmental system · Social institutions

5 The psychology of perpetrators: individuals and groups 67
Roles and other social processes as origins of harm-doing 69
Self-selection and the personality of perpetrators 69
The potentially antisocial person · Family origins of the potentially antisocial personality · Authority orientation and its sources in the family
The origins of destructiveness in personality and in the situation 75
The fanatic as perpetrator 76
Behavior in groups 77
The subcultures of perpetrators · Psychological functioning and individual responsibility

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-42214-7 - The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence
Ervin Staub
Table of Contents
More information

6 Steps along a continuum of destruction: perpetrators and bystanders 79
Just-world thinking 79
Learning by doing and the evolution of extreme destructiveness 80
Compartmentalization and integration
Other origins of mistreatment 85
The role and power of bystanders 86

Part II The Nazi Holocaust

7 Hitler comes to power 91
Genocide and "insanity" 91
Life conditions: loss of war, the Treaty of Versailles, and economic and political chaos 91
The guiding motive for the Holocaust: ideology 94
Reasons for Hitler's appeal: a summary 98

8 Preconditions for the Holocaust in German culture 100
The devaluation of Jews 100
Self-concept, self-esteem, and national goals 104
The Germans as a superior people
Respect for and obedience to authority 108
The influence of Nietzsche 111
Rationality versus sentimental romanticism 113
The psychological effects on German youth of World War I and the postwar period 113
Youth groups and military groups after World War I 114

9 Nazi rule and steps along the continuum of destruction 116
Increasing mistreatment of Jews 117
The evolution of ideas, actions, and the system: euthanasia and genocide 121
The power of giving onself over to a group, an ideal, or a leader 124
The role of the totalitarian system 125

10 The SS and the psychology of perpetrators 128
The creation, evolution, and role of the SS 128
Characteristics of SS members
Learning by participation 134

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-42214-7 - The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence
Ervin Staub
Table of Contents
More information

The interweaving and merging of role and person 137
The extermination camps: Auschwitz 141
The psychology of perpetrators: individuals and the system 144
The characteristics and functioning of perpetrators · Behavioral shifts
Moral equilibration, choice, and responsibility 147
Individual responsibility
The completion tendency: killing till the very end 149

11 The behavior and psychology of bystanders and victims 151
The role of bystanders 151
The passivity of German bystanders · Bystanders and perpetrators in Nazi Europe · The passivity of the outside world
Jewish cooperation, resistance, and psychological experience 158
The Jewish councils · Jewish actions · The psychology of victims
The power of heroic bystanders 165
Heroic rescuers

Part III Other genocides and mass killings

12 The Turkish genocide of the Armenians 173
Historical (life) conditions 173
Cultural preconditions 175
The devaluation of minorities and Christians · Orientation to authority
Steps along the continuum of destruction 176
Devaluation and increasing mistreatment
Armenian "provocation" 178
The evolution of Young Turk ideology 181
The machinery of destruction
The genocide 182
The role of bystanders 184

13 Cambodia: genocide to create a better world 188
Historical (life) conditions 188
Cambodian peasants: economic conditions, uprising, reprisals · Political instability and violence
The Khmer Rouge rule and "autogenocide" 191

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-42214-7 - The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence
Ervin Staub
Table of Contents
More information

Ideological bias and reports and views of atrocities
Ideology, world view, and the aims of the Khmer Rouge 194
Cultural preconditions: the roots of ideology and genocide 195
Class divisions, urban–rural rift, and slavery · Orientation to authority · The ideology of antagonism toward Vietnam · Cultural self-concept · A tradition of violence in Cambodia
Experiential and intellectual sources of ideology and fanaticism 201
Gaining followers: the tools of revolution and genocide 204
The role of specific individuals 206
Steps along the continuum of destruction 208
The role of bystanders 208

14 This disappearances: mass killing in Argentina 210
Historical (life) conditions 210
Economic difficulties · Political conflict and violence
Cultural preconditions 212
The role of the military in public life · The self-concept and ideology of the military
Steps along the continuum of destruction 217
Changing institutions · The machinery of destruction
The mass killings 220
The selection of victims: ideology, self-interest, caprice 223
The psychology of direct perpetrators 225
The role of bystanders 227
Internal bystanders · Mothers of the Plaza del Mayo · External bystanders
Conclusions 230

15 Summary and conclusions: the societal and psychological origins of genocide and other atrocities 232
A comparison of the four instances 232
Difficult life conditions · Cultural preconditions
Leaders and followers 236
The psychology and motives of perpetrators 237
The psychological processes of groups
Steps along the continuum of destruction 238
The obligation of bystanders 239
More and less central origins of genocide 240
Predicting genocide and mass killing 241
The psychology of torture and torturers 244

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-42214-7 - The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence
Ervin Staub
Table of Contents
More information

Part IV Further extensions: the roots of war and the creation of caring and nonaggressive persons and societies

16 The cultural and psychological origins of war 249
Motivations for war 249
Cultural preconditions for war 250
The ideology of antagonism · Societal self-concept and national goals · Nationalism, belonging, and the self-concept · National security and related ideologies · World views that contribute to war · Pluralistic versus monolithic societies · Leadership
The national interest 257
Minimalism in the relations of nations 258
Toward positive reciprocity 259

17 The nature of groups: security, power, justice, and positive connection 261
Assumptions about human nature and the nature of societies 262
An alternative view of individual and group potentials 264
Relations between the individual and the group
Important societal issues 266
Social justice and life problems · Creating a society of enablement · Individualism and community · The accountability of leaders · Freedom, pluralism, and self-censorship

18 The creation and evolution of caring, connection, and nonaggression 274
Changing cultures and the relations between societies 274
Crosscutting relations and superordinate goals · Learning by doing and steps along a continuum of benevolence · Creating positive connections between groups
Positive socialization: parenting, the family, and schools 279
Avenues for change 281
Language and ideas · Writers, artists, the media, leaders, all citizens

Notes 284
Index 319

© Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org