ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Academics produce books deeply indebted to the people and institutions that nurtured their creators. My debts are numerous. First I wish to thank the Radcliffe Research Scholars Support Awards, which gave me a “babysitting grant” enabling me to work in the Arthur and Elizabeth Schlesinger Library on the History of Women in America in 1983 when I, a new mother, accompanied my husband to Cambridge during his fellowship year. Subsequently my own institution, the City University of New York, granted me Professional Staff Congress–Board of Higher Education (PSC–BHE) awards in 1984–5, 1987–8, and 1988–9, which gave me travel and support money during summer vacations. The English Department at Queens granted me a course reduction during the fall semester of 1987; and the CUNY Faculty Development Program admitted me to a course on Computing in the Humanities and Social Sciences in 1985–6, which taught me to use a computer and consequently accelerated production of this book by at least a year. To all these support programs, I am deeply grateful.

As always, libraries and their staffs figure prominently among the institutions and people integral to this kind of project. While researching this book I learned to value the New-York Historical Society’s Manuscripts Division and its Curator, Mr. Duning; The American Antiquarian Society and its staff, especially Barbara Trippel Simmons and Keith Arbour; the New York Public Library; the Stowe-Day Foundation; the Arthur and Elizabeth Schlesinger Library on the History of Women in America at Radcliffe College, especially its Director, Patricia King; the Antiochiana Archives and its Director, Nina Myatt; the Rare Books and Manuscripts Library of Columbia University’s Butler Library; and the Long Island (now Brooklyn) Historical Society.

Early versions of three chapters of this book were published in scholarly journals: Chapter 6, on Elizabeth Drew Stoddard’s The Morgesons, in ESQ: A Journal of the American Renaissance, Volume 31, 1st Quarter, 1985;

Chapter 5, on E.D.E.N. Southworth's The Deserted Wife, in Legacy: A Journal of Nineteenth-Century American Women Writers, Volume 4, Number 2 (Fall, 1987); and Chapter 4, on Fanny Fern's Ruth Hall, in Style, Volume 22, Number 4 (Winter, 1988).

Many friends and colleagues aided and encouraged me as this book slowly evolved. Joanne Dobson, Janice Radway, Jane Tompkins, Glenna Matthews, David Richter, Cathy Davidson, Mary Kelley, Don Stone, Lawrence Buell, and Fred Kaplan all read early versions of proposals and/or chapters and gave me invaluable advice. Joanne Dobson and Jane Tompkins, especially, helped me sort out my ideas during long conversations. I also want to thank my undergraduate students in English 152 and 351, and my graduate students, all of whom listened, questioned, and challenged me as I began to question and challenge the very concepts and authors I was teaching them. Cambridge University Press readers urged this book to its final version; I thank them for their kind, but incisive, readings. Albert Gelpi, the Editor for the Cambridge Studies in American Literature and Culture series, deserves my gratitude for his decisiveness and promptness, as does Andrew Brown, Publications Director for the Humanities, for his encouragement.

But most of all I want to thank my husband, Billy Joe, helpmate and wise counselor always; my daughter, Kate, who has shown me that even very little women question their inscription in texts; and my babysitter, Myrtle Levy, without whom this book surely would never have been written.
