CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-43093-7 - Byzantium in the Iconoclast Era c. 680–850: A History
Leslie Brubaker and John Haldon
Table of Contents
More information

Contents

A note on names and placenames [page ix]
List of illustrations [xi]
Photographic credits [xv]
List of maps [xvii]
Abbreviations [xviii]

Introduction [1]

1 Belief, ideology, and practice in a changing world [9]
The context and background [9]
Changing attitudes to imperial authority [11]
Imperial politics and perceptions [15]
The search for causes and the problem of causation [18]
The contribution of changing social and economic relationships [22]
The evolving role of the armies [26]
Reconstruction and re-affirmation [29]
The cult of saints, the cult of relics, and the cult of images [32]
Relics and iconoclasm [38]
The cult of images [40]
Texts about images before the seventh century [44]
Icons before iconoclasm [50]
Opposition to religious images before iconoclasm [66]

2 Leo III: iconoclast or opportunist? [69]
The background to the reign of Leo III [70]
The problem of an 'imperial iconoclasm' [79]
The dearth of evidence for early imperial iconoclasm [89]
Germanos and Constantine of Nakoleia [94]
Germanos and Thomas of Klaudioupolis [98]
'External' influences? Islam, Judaism, and the evidence from Christian communities under Umayyad rule [105]
The opening stages and the supposed edict against images [117]
An imperial edict? [119]
The problem of the Chalke icon [128]
The nature and arguments of early iconoclasm [135]

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-43093-7 - Byzantium in the Iconoclast Era c. 680–850: A History
Leslie Brubaker and John Haldon
Table of Contents
More information

Leo III Philostauros [140]
Artisanal production under Leo III: preserved and documentary evidence [144]
Conclusions [151]

3 Constantine V and the institutionalisation of iconoclasm [156]
Rebellions and reforms [156]
East and west: the stabilisation of state frontiers [163]
The question of the images: theology and pragmatism [176]
The Council of 754 and its results [189]
The nature of iconoclastic persecution: myths and realities [197]
The destruction of images? [199]
Artisanal production under Constantine V [212]
Architecture and architectural decoration [212]
Icons [218]
Manuscripts [220]
Silks [225]
Coins [226]
Artisanal production outside the empire [227]
'Iconoclasm' in Palestine [232]
Constantine V and the monasteries: persecution – or a response to 'treason'? [234]

4 The triumph of tradition? The iconophile intermission, 775–813 [248]
Leo IV and his political inheritance [248]
The Council of 787 and the 'restoration' of images [260]
Reactions [276]
The reigns of Constantine and Eirene [286]
Artisanal production [294]
Architecture and architectural decoration [294]
Documentary evidence: Constantinople [309]
Documentary evidence: Byzantine hinterlands [314]
Manuscripts: the introduction of minuscule [317]
Vatican, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, gr. 1666: Dialogues of Gregory the Great [317]
Mount Sinai, Monastery of St Catherine: Menaion [320]
Icons [320]
Silks [336]
The Trier ivory [347]
Metalwork [348]
Pectoral crosses [350]
Coins [352]
Artisanal production during the 'iconophile intermission': conclusions [355]
Nikephoros I and the consolidation of the state: 802–11 [357]

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-43093-7 - Byzantium in the Iconoclast Era c. 680–850: A History
Leslie Brubaker and John Haldon
Table of Contents
More information

5 The second iconoclasm [366]
Leo V and the re-imposition of imperial iconoclasm: 813–20 [366]
The synod of 815 and the second iconoclasm [372]
Michael II: 820–9 [386]
Theophilos: 829–42 [392]
829–42: the broader context [404]
The artisanal production of second iconoclasm [411]
The context [412]
Architecture and architectural decoration [416]
Monumental painting [426]
Manuscripts [428]
Coins [431]
Metalwork [435]
Icons [440]
Silks [441]
Artisanal production outside the empire [443]
Artisanal production during second iconoclasm: conclusions [445]
The 'triumph' of orthodoxy [447]

6 Economy, society, and state [453]
The context [455]
The environmental background [459]
Patterns of economic activity: the state [464]
Resources and coinage [470]
The incidence of taxation [475]
The state and its redistributive cycle [482]
Non-state activity [488]
Ceramic and other evidence: the background [493]
Ceramic and other evidence: the eighth–ninth centuries [500]
The movement of goods [506]
Trade and commerce in the seventh, eighth, and ninth centuries [511]
Commerce with the wider world [512]
Internal trade [519]
Commerce, the state, and the economy [524]

7 Patterns of settlement: urban and rural life [531]
Towns, villages, and fortresses: context [531]
The seventh, eighth, and ninth centuries [538]
Types of urbanism: polis, kastron and other settlements [544]
The wider context: towns, fortresses, and refuges [549]
Settlement economies [559]
Villages, rural society, and local elites [564]

8 Social elites and the court [573]
Towards a new social elite [575]
Rank and title [591]

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-43093-7 - Byzantium in the Iconoclast Era c. 680–850: A History
Leslie Brubaker and John Haldon
Table of Contents
More information

Income and access to resources [598]
Status and office in the eighth and early ninth centuries [601]
Society, ritual space, and topography [616]

9 Society, politics, and power [625]
Soldiers and society [627]
Armies and politics [630]
Beliefs, attitudes, and action: who were the iconoclasts and iconophiles? [642]
Church and monastic opposition to imperial iconoclasm: myths and realities [650]

10 Fiscal management and administration [665]
Provincial government [665]
The sixth- and seventh-century context [667]
The survival of late Roman structures and titles: eparchoi and anthypatoi [671]
Thematic protonotarioi: fiscal structures and resources [679]
Kommerkiarioi and apothekai: from customs to crisis-management [682]
The imperial kommerkia and kommerkiarioi in the eighth and ninth centuries [695]
The role of the dromos [705]
General tendencies in the evolution of the middle Byzantine fiscal system [709]
Provisional conclusions [715]
Taxation and the assessment of resources [717]

11 Strategic administration and the origins of the themata [723]
The nature of provincial military administration: origins and evolution [723]
The armies: change and development in the eighth and ninth centuries [729]
The implications of the title strategos [734]
New armies and the evolution of the middle Byzantine system [739]
Nikephoros I and the creation of the themata [744]
The multiplication of military divisions [755]
The substructures of provincial military administration [764]

12 Iconoclasm, representation, and rewriting the past [772]
Why iconoclasm? [774]
Representation [782]
Rewriting the past [787]

Sources [800]
Literature [815]
Index [907]

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org