

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-43253-5 - Rethinking World History: Essays on Europe, Islam, and World History

Marshall G. S. Hodgson

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

Editor's preface	page vii
Introduction: Marshall G. S. Hodgson and world history	ix
Edmund Burke, III
Part I Europe in a global context
1 The interrelations of societies in history	3
2 In the center of the map: Nations see themselves as the hub of history	29
3 World history and a world outlook	35
4 The great Western Transmutation	44
5 Historical method in civilizational studies	72
6 On doing world history	91
Part II Islam in a global context
7 The role of Islam in world history	97
8 Cultural patterning in Islamdom and the Occident	126
9 The unity of later Islamic history	171
10 Modernity and the Islamic heritage	207
Part III The discipline of world history
11 The objectivity of large-scale historical inquiry: Its peculiar limits and requirements	247
12 Conditions of historical comparison among ages and regions: The limitations of their validity	267
13 Interregional studies as integrating the historical disciplines: The practical implications of an interregional orientation for scholars and for the public	288

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-43253-5 - Rethinking World History: Essays on Europe, Islam, and World History

Marshall G. S. Hodgson

Table of Contents

More information

vi

Contents

Conclusion: Islamic history as world history: Marshall G.S. Hodgson and The Venture of Islam

Edmund Burke, III

301