

Contents

List of tables	page ix
List of figures	x
Preface	xi
List of contributors	xiii
1 An introduction to the spread of economic ideas A. W. Coats and David C. Colander	1
Part I From economist to economist
2 The state of economics: hopeless but not serious? Robert W. Clower	23
3 The invisible hand of truth David C. Colander	31
4 Faith, hope, and clarity Robert M. Solow	37
5 How ideas spread among economists: examples from international economics Charles P. Kindleberger	43
6 Journals, university presses, and the spread of ideas Colin Day	61
Part II From economists to the lay public
7 How economic ideas turn to mush Robert M. Solow	75
8 The development of the ideas: strategic trade policy and competitiveness David Warsh	85

viii	Contents
9	Economics and the common reader Donald S. Lamm	95
	Part III From economist to policymaker
10	Economic ideas and economists in government: accomplishments and frustrations A. W. Coats	109
11	The spread of economic ideas between academia and government: a two-way street William J. Barber	119
12	The exchange of favors in the market for commitments James K. Galbraith	127
13	How tax reform came about Joseph J. Minarik	141
	Part IV Funding the spread of economic ideas
14	Doing good and spreading the gospel (economic) Craufurd D. Goodwin	157
15	Think tanks and the politics of ideas James A. Smith	175
16	The role of the NSF in the spread of economic ideas Daniel H. Newlon	195
17	Money and the spread of ideas David C. Colander	229
18	Changing incentives to make economics more relevant Gordon Tullock	235
	Bibliography	249
	Index	257