CAMBRIDGE ASIA-PACIFIC STUDIES

Cambridge Asia-Pacific Studies aims to provide a focus and forum for scholarly work on the Asia-Pacific region as a whole, and its component sub-regions, namely Northeast Asia, Southeast Asia and the Pacific Islands.

Editor: John Ravenhill

Editorial Board: James Cotton, Donald Denoon, Mark Elvin, David Goodman, Stephen Henningham, Hal Hill, David Lim, Ron May, Anthony Milner, Tessa Morris-Suzuki
LAND, CUSTOM AND PRACTICE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC

EDITED BY

R. GERARD WARD and ELIZABETH KINGDON

Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies
Australian National University
Contents

List of Figures vi
List of Tables vii
Contributors ix
Acknowledgements xi

Introduction 1

1 Land Use and Tenure: Some Comparisons 6
   R. Gerard Ward and Elizabeth Kingdon

2 Land Tenure in the Pacific Islands 36
   R. Gerard Ward and Elizabeth Kingdon

3 Breathing Spaces: Customary Land Tenure in Vanuatu 65
   Margaret Rodman

4 From Corporate to Individual Land Tenure in Western Samoa 109
   J. Tim O’Meara

5 Right and Privilege in Tongan Land Tenure 157
   Kerry James

6 Land, Law and Custom: Diverging Realities in Fiji 198
   R. Gerard Ward

7 Beyond the Breathing Space 250
   Antony Hooper and R. Gerard Ward

Bibliography 265
Index 280
Figures

The Pacific Islands

2.1 Land divisions and soils on Atiu, Cook Islands
2.2 Cattle-farm leases, Sote-Naïtutu beef scheme, Fiji
3.1 Vanuatu
3.2 Longana land holdings, 1978
3.3 Waileni, 1978
3.4 Waileni, 1993
3.5 The hamlet of Lovatu'weliweli, north Waileni, 1982
3.6 The hamlet of Lovatu'weliweli, north Waileni, 1993
4.1 Western Samoa
4.2 Type of tenure within Vaega village, 1993
4.3 Type of tenure of agricultural plots, Vaega village, 1983
4.4 Type of tenure of agricultural plots, Vaega village, 1993
4.5 Sub-types of ‘Old tenure’, Vaega village, 1993
4.6 Sub-types of ‘New tenure’, Vaega village, 1993
4.7 Sub-types of ‘Changed to new tenure’, Vaega village, 1993
5.1 Tonga
5.2 ‘Falaha’ Island
5.3 Transmission of land and people on ‘Falaha’; case I
5.4 Transmission of land and people on ‘Falaha’; case II
5.5 Expansion of the urban area of Nuku‘alofa
6.1 Fiji
6.2 Viti Levu
6.3 Former settlement sites of Sote village mataqali
6.4 Conflicting land claims, Dreketi River area
6.5 Garden and land ownership, Saliadrau village, 1958
6.6 Garden and land ownership, Saliadrau village, 1983
6.7 Registered and hypothetical land ownership, Sote village
6.8 Garden and land ownership, Sote village, 1959
6.9 Garden and land ownership, Sote village, 1983
Tables

3.1 Registered land in the New Hebrides, 1976 76
3.2 Frequency of siblings as land holders 96
3.3 Mode of land acquisition 96
5.1 Land holding in Tonga, 1989 184
6.1 Distribution of land by class of tenure 199
6.2 Relationship between garden and land ownership 227
To our Pacific Island hosts and friends
Contributors

KERRY JAMES has worked at the Universities of Canterbury, New England and the South Pacific, as well as the Australian National University and the East-West Center, Honolulu. She is the author of many articles on Tonga and editor of Women in Rural Australia (1989), Religious Cooperation in the Pacific Islands (1989) and Pacific Village Economies, a special issue of Pacific Viewpoint (1993).

ANTONY HOOKER is Professor Emeritus, University of Auckland and Fellow, East-West Center, Honolulu. His field research in the Pacific Islands has focused in particular on French Polynesia and Tokelau and in addition to many articles he is an author or editor of Why Tikopia has Four Clans (1981), Transformations of Polynesian Culture (1985), Class and Culture in the South Pacific (1985), Matai Tokelau: History and Traditions of Tokelau (1991) and Tokelau: Migration and Health in a Small Polynesian Society (1992).

ELIZABETH KINGDON is Research Assistant in the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, Australian National University. She was formerly Editorial Assistant with the Asian Studies Association of Australia’s ASAA Review and Assistant Editor of the Australian Journal of Chinese Affairs and has worked on Pacific Island research for some years.

J. TIM O’MEARA is Senior Lecturer in Anthropology, University of Melbourne. He is the author of Samoan Planters: Tradition and Economic Development in Polynesia (1990) and articles on Western Samoa and Pacific Island anthropology.

MARGARET RODMAN is Professor of Anthropology, York University, Toronto. She is the author of Masters of Tradition: Consequences of Customary Land Tenure in Longana, Vanuatu (1987) and Deep Water: Development and Change in Pacific Village Fisheries (1989) as well as many articles on Vanuatu and other areas.
x

CONTRIBUTORS

R. GERARD WARD is Professor of Human Geography, Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, Australian National University. Books of which he is an author or editor include Land Use and Population in Fiji (1965), American Activities in the Central Pacific, 1790–1870 (8 vols. 1966–69), Man in the Pacific Islands (1972), The Settlement of Polynesia: a Computer Simulation (1973), South Pacific Agriculture: Choices and Constraints (1980), and New Directions in the South Pacific (1988). His field experience includes Fiji, Western Samoa, Vanuatu and Papua New Guinea.
Acknowledgements

We would like to express our thanks to the governments and people of Fiji, Tonga, Vanuatu and Western Samoa for accepting us as guests in their countries on many occasions. We have also benefited from opportunities to undertake research in other Pacific Island countries and in the course of preparing this volume such visits have been important for the comparative perspectives they have provided. We are most grateful to all the island people who have made this possible.

With our field experience in the Pacific Islands spanning several decades, we have received support from many ‘home institutions’ and research grant bodies. We acknowledge these in general, but must also mention some specifically.

Antony Hooper is grateful to Sitiveni Halapua, Director of the Pacific Islands Development Program at the East-West Center, Honolulu, for allowing him to take up the opportunity to participate in this project.

Kerry James would like to acknowledge the support of the Australian Research Grants Committee for funding her field work in Tonga from 1982 to 1984. She thanks the people of Tonga, and in particular those of ‘Falahola’, for their friendship and assistance.

Tim O’Meara’s research in Malie and Neiafu in 1984 was supported by the University of the South Pacific and the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations. Research in Satupaita from 1981 to 1983 was supported by a grant from the U.S. National Science Foundation. Tupuola Tavita and Tuisugaleta Sofara provided oversight as successive Directors of the Department of Agriculture, Forests and Fisheries. Tapusatele Keli Tuatagaloa and Galumalemana Netina Schmidt greatly facilitated the research as successive Registrars of the Land and Titles Court, as did members of their staff in Mulinu‘u and Tuasivi. The Chiefs and Orators of Malie, Neiafu, and Vaega supported the research in their villages. Nu‘u Vili and Faleilemilo Fa‘alaga were primarily responsible for guiding the field mapping of plots in Vaega.
Margaret Rodman acknowledges the funding of her research in and on Vanuatu by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada in 1978–9, 1982 and 1985; the Wenner–Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research in 1993; and York University in 1993. Over the years the people of the Longana District have helped her understanding of matters of land and custom and she expresses her gratitude to them.

Gerard Ward’s work in Fiji was funded initially by the New Zealand University Carnegie Social Science Research Committee, and later by the Colonial Social Science Research Council, London, the Central Research Fund of the University of London, and the Australian National University. He is indebted to many people in Fiji for help since first working there in the 1950s but in connection with this study he is particularly grateful to the people of Nabudrau, Saliadrau, and Sote villages who gave hospitality and assistance in 1958, 1959 and 1983.

In 1993 the authors of the four country studies were all able to make brief visits to those countries to renew contacts and re-check or extend field data. These visits were all made possible by fieldwork grants from the Australian National University and we are grateful to the University for this assistance. The whole group also benefited from the Visiting Fellowships which the University awarded to Antony Hooper, Kerry James, Tim O’Meara and Margaret Rodman to enable them to assemble in Canberra on two occasions to work together on their chapters.

We are all grateful to Keith Mitchell, Cartography Unit, Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, Australian National University, for his skilful preparation of the maps and diagrams.

In the course of preparing this volume we all benefited from discussions with many colleagues in the Pacific Islands, in our home universities, and in other places. We all asked colleagues to read and comment on all or parts of our chapters and their advice helped us a great deal. The list of such people is very long and we hope that they will accept our thanks and appreciation in a general acknowledgement which is no less warm for its anonymity.

Our prime thanks, however must go to our many Pacific Island hosts and guides who over many years have helped us in our research and become good friends and colleagues. It is to them this book is dedicated.

Antony Hooper
Kerry James
Tim O’Meara
Margaret Rodman
Lilli Pilli, NSW
Australia
Elizabeth Kingdon
Gerard Ward