Acknowledgments

This book began life as a thesis, initially at the University of Melbourne and subsequently at Macquarie University. It was completed while I was teaching Australian Studies at the University of Queensland. Parts of this book have appeared in earlier forms in a variety of places, including the Australian Journal of Politics and History, Political Theory Newsletter, G. Melleuish (ed.), Australia as a Social and Cultural Laboratory (St Lucia, 1990), G. Stokes (ed.), Australian Political Ideas (Sydney, 1994), L. Dobrez (ed.), Identifying Australia in Postmodern Times (ANU, 1994) and P. Gathercole, T. Irving and G. Melleuish (eds), Childe and Australia (St Lucia, 1995). The section on V. Gordon Childe appeared in an earlier version in Quadrant, January 1989.

I should like to thank all the people who kindly provided me with ideas and suggestions while work proceeded on this study. I have particularly fond memories of long discussions with Dr Bob Dreher and Dr Geoffrey Sherington of the University of Sydney. I benefited much from the advice of my colleagues at the University of Queensland, Professor Geoffrey Bolton and Dr George Shaw of the Department of History and Dr Geoff Stokes of the Department of Government. I should especially like to thank both George Shaw and Geoff Stokes for the moral support they provided during difficult times.

I learned much from discussions with Dr John Moses on the responses of Australian academics to World War I and on George Arnold Wood. Dr Wayne Hudson of Griffith University provided assistance both academic and practical. I should also like to thank all of those who bore the burden of supervising the PhD thesis from which this book is derived, my original supervisor at the University of Melbourne, Dr Ian Britain, and my supervisor at Macquarie University, Associate Professor Jill Roe. I should also like to thank my students in ID 218, Australian Cultural Studies at the University of Queensland from 1988 to 1992 on whom many of the ideas in this book were first tried out. In particular I am thankful for a period of study leave from the University of Queensland that enabled me to complete the manuscript of the thesis in 1991. I would also like to thank the Burgmann family for permission to consult the Burgmann papers held by the National Library of Australia.

In addition I should like to thank my wife Diana, without whose support and assistance this work would never have been completed. She typed and edited both the original thesis and this manuscript, correcting some of my more fanciful prose constructions, dealing with textual minutiae as well as suggesting some of the sub-headings in the text. Long has she struggled to get this work into proper shape. Along with our children, Alice and Helen, she has had to live with this work for many years. Finally, I am always grateful to my parents Des and Rita Melleuish, who first encouraged my interest in matters academic and made possible an appreciation of the phenomenon that was Cultural Liberalism.

Final responsibility for any errors remains as always with the author.
