

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-49917-0 - The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

Thomas Postlewait

Frontmatter

More information

The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

This Introduction – an indispensable “how to” guide for students and teachers alike – investigates the methods and aims of historical study in the performing arts, from archival research to historical writing. Beginning with case studies on Shakespearean theatre and avant-garde theatre, this study examines fundamental procedures and problems in documentary history and cultural history. It demonstrates how historians not only construct various kinds of performance events but also place them in relation to the historical agents, the political and social conditions, artistic traditions, audience responses, and historical periods. Drawing upon scholarship in classics, literary studies, art history, performance studies, and general history, Postlewait shows how to ask appropriate historical questions, construct evidence, use plays as historical documents, eliminate faulty sources, challenge unreliable witnesses, and develop historical arguments and narratives. The book concludes with a survey of the “twelve cruxes” of research, analysis, and writing in theatre history.

THOMAS POSTLEWAIT is Professor in the School of Drama,
University of Washington.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-49917-0 - The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

Thomas Postlewait

Frontmatter

More information

The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

THOMAS POSTLEWAIT

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-49917-0 - The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography
Thomas Postlewait
Frontmatter
More information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town, Singapore, São Paulo, Delhi

Cambridge University Press
The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 8RU, UK

Published in the United States of America by Cambridge University Press, New York

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9780521499170

© Thomas Postlewait 2009

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2009

Printed in the United Kingdom at the University Press, Cambridge

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloguing in Publication data
Postlewait, Thomas.

The Cambridge introduction to theatre historiography / Thomas Postlewait.
p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-0-521-49570-7 (hardback)

1. Theatre—Historiography. I. Title. II. Title:
Cambridge introduction to theatre historiography.

PN2101.P67 2009

792.09—dc22 2009000049

ISBN 978-0-521-49570-7 hardback

ISBN 978-0-521-49917-0 paperback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Contents

List of illustrations	page vi
Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction: on some preliminary matters	1
Part One Documentary history vs. cultural history: two case studies	25
1 Documentary histories: the case of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre	27
2 Cultural histories: the case of Alfred Jarry's Ubu Roi	60
Part Two Historical vs. theatrical events	87
3 The historical event	89
4 The theatrical event	117
Part Three Placing events within their contexts	155
5 The criteria for periodization in theatre history: definitive categories for events	157
6 The idea of the "political" in our histories of theatre: causal contexts for events	196
Part Four Summing up	223
7 The theatrical event and its conditions: a primer with twelve cruxes	225
Notes	270
Works cited	300
Index	339

Illustrations

- | | |
|---|---------|
| 1. Swan Theatre, c. 1596–1597, copied by Arend (Aernout) van Buchel from a drawing by Johannes De Witt. From Karl Theodor Gaedertz, Zur Kenntnis der altenglischen Bühne nebst andern Beiträgen zur Shakespeare-Litteratur . Bremen: C. Ed. Müller, 1888. By permission of the library of the University of California, Santa Barbara. | page 28 |
| 2. Title page of the 1623 First Folio of William Shakespeare's plays, edited by John Heminges and Henry Condell. By permission of the Huntington Library. | 37 |
| 3. Wenceslaus Hollar, Long View of London from Southwark (c. 1647); the Globe Theatre is mislabeled Beere bayting h and the Hope Theatre is mislabeled The Globe . By permission of the Guildhall Library, City of London. | 50 |
| 4. Property list by Philip Henslowe for the Admiral's Men, Rose Theatre, dated March 10, 1598 (i.e., 1599 according to Gregorian calendar, beginning in January, not the middle of March). From Edmond Malone, The Plays and Poems of William Shakespeare , vol. I, part two, London, 1790, pages 300–7. By permission of Rare Books Library, Ohio State University. | 52 |
| 5. Hand gestures for orators. From John Bulwer, Chirologia: or the Natural Language of the Hand . London, 1644. By permission of the Huntington Library. | 54 |
| 6. Homo ad quadratum , a drawing from Di Lucio Vitruuio Pollione de Architectura Libri Dece: traducti de latino in vulgare affigurati . . . By Augustinus Gallo et al. Como, Italy: Gotardo da Ponte, 1521, page Gii. By permission of Edinburgh University Library, Special Collections Department, JY 973. | 56 |
| 7. Alfred Jarry, drawing from 1896 by Caran d'Ache. By permission of La Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris. | 62 |
| 8. Title page of Ubu Roi , featuring Père Ubu; Paris: Mercure de France, 1896. By permission of La Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris. | 65 |
| 9. Lithograph by Alfred Jarry of program for Ubu Roi , performed by Théâtre de l'Œuvre, Paris 1896. By permission of La Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris. | 67 |

	List of illustrations	vii
10. Production poster for touring companies of Uncle Tom's Cabin . By permission of the Theatre Research Institute, Ohio State University.	122
11. Henrik Ibsen in the 1880s. Collection of Thomas Postlewait.	127
12. Janet Achurch as Nora and Herbert Waring as Torvald, in the London production of A Doll's House in 1889 at the Novelty Theatre. Source: Henrik Ibsen. A Doll's House . Trans. William Archer. London: Fischer Unwin, 1889. By permission of the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas, Austin.	133
13. Janet Achurch as Nora and Charles Charrington as Dr. Rank in the stocking scene of A Doll's House , London, 1889. Source: Henrik Ibsen. A Doll's House . Trans. William Archer. London: Fischer Unwin, 1889. By permission of the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas, Austin.	135
14. Bernard Shaw in the early 1890s. Collection of Thomas Postlewait.	137
15. William Archer in the 1890s. Collection of Thomas Postlewait.	141
16. Max Beerbohm's caricature of "Henrik Ibsen receiving Mr. William Archer in Audience." From Max Beerbohm, The Poet's Corner , London: W. Heineman, 1904. By permission of the Library of the University of Washington.	143
17. Janet Achurch as Nora, in the costume for the tarantella dance in A Doll's House , London, 1889. Source: Henrik Ibsen. A Doll's House . Trans. William Archer. London: Fischer Unwin, 1889. By permission of the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas, Austin.	246
18. Elizabeth Robins as Hilda Wangel in Ibsen's The Master Builder , Opera Comique Theatre, London, 1893. By permission of the Fales Library, New York University, and the Trustees of Backsettown.	255

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-49917-0 - The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

Thomas Postlewait

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgements

This book, which unites several aspects of my scholarship in theatre history, began two decades ago with an appointment at the Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities at Edinburgh University. During those months in Scotland I was able to launch my studies on the problem of periodization. Three years later, when I received a Research Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities, I continued my readings in historiography and wrote some initial sections of this book, including two published essays. Over several years, while working on this study – and taking on a number of other writing, editing, and administrative projects – I had to learn, rather slowly, that the task of composing an introduction to one's field of study is always a preliminary, not a final, project. After writing and rewriting various sections and publishing several articles, I completed a full draft of this book in 2004 during my sabbatical leave at Ohio State University. Then during a research leave in London in autumn 2006, thanks to an award I received from OSU, I was able to revise the manuscript (on the basis of the reader's report and suggestions from a few colleagues). Needless to say, I am deeply grateful for the research leaves and awards I have received over these years.

I published versions of my developing ideas in several journals: Theatre Journal (40.3: 299–318 and 43.2: 157–78), Contemporary Theatre Review (12.3: 9–35), Nordic Theatre Studies (Special Issue: 52–55), and Assaph (12: 1–31). I also published some ideas on theatre historiography in Theatrical Events – Borders, Dynamics, Frames, edited by Vicki Cremona, Willman Sauter, John Tulloch, and Hans van Maanen (Rodoophi, 2004: 33–52) and in the two editions of Critical Theory and Performance, edited by Janelle Reinelt and Joseph Roach (University of Michigan, 1992: 356–68 and 2007: 198–222). I thank the editors for their support and guidance. I am grateful to the publishers for permission to draw upon and reprint parts of these essays, which in revised form have contributed to this book.

I also appreciate the invitations to deliver talks at various locations, including University of Washington, University of Pittsburgh, University of Maryland, University of Texas, Arizona State University, Northwestern University, University of California at Santa Barbara, University of Illinois, Brown University, Helsinki University, Trinity College in Dublin, Tel Aviv University (both the Porter Institute and the Department of Theatre), Stockholm University, and Warwick University. It is a pleasure to thank faculty members and students at these universities for their invitations, conversations, and challenges. I am also beholden to several archives and research libraries, including the British Theatre Association (no longer in existence), the Theatre Museum at Covent

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-49917-0 - The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

Thomas Postlewait

Frontmatter

More informationAcknowledgements ix

Garden, the British Library (in its old and new locations), and the Huntington Museum and Library. I also carried out research in the Victoria and Albert Museum, the National Library of Scotland, Harvard Theatre Collection, the Harry Ransom Center at the University of Texas, the Theatre Research Institute at Ohio State University, the Fales Collection at New York University, and the Billy Rose Collection at the New York Public Library at Lincoln Center. As well, I have spent many productive hours in the main libraries at Edinburgh University, MIT, Harvard University, University of Georgia, Indiana University, Ohio State University, and the University of Washington. I thank the staffs of all of these archives and libraries.

In the penultimate stage of this project I received a detailed reader's report from Don Wilmeth, who read the manuscript for Cambridge University Press. He has my sincere regard for his support, suggestions, and corrections. I also happily acknowledge the people at the press who have encouraged me throughout the process. Sarah Stanton commissioned the project. Vicki Cooper patiently encouraged me to define the study as an introductory text. Both Rebecca Jones and Elizabeth Davey, as accomplished editors, have guided me through the last stages of preparations for the text and illustrations. And a special note of gratitude for Audrey Cotterell, my sharp-eyed copy-editor. My appreciation goes to everyone at Cambridge University Press.

In both the early and later stages of this book project, I have received valuable commentary from colleagues in the American Society for Theatre Research and the International Federation for Theatre Research. For the last two decades, these two societies have been my professional homes away from home. I want to give special thanks to the members of the Theatre Historiography Working Group in IFTR. At meetings in many locations, including Stockholm, Helsinki, Dublin, Tel Aviv, Amsterdam, Worcester, Canterbury, College Park, Maryland, and St. Petersburg, I was able to share ideas with scholars from many countries. One does not write alone, but as part of a community of scholars whose research and ideas help to define the parameters of one's own thoughts and intellectual development. I therefore offer a special tribute to the members of the Working Group.

Over the years, as I developed my teaching and scholarship, my colleagues and departmental chairs at University of Georgia, Indiana University, and Ohio State University provided a supportive community. I thank them all. In turn, I am very pleased to join my new colleagues in the School of Drama, University of Washington. In particular, this book benefits from professional engagements with a number of the leading scholars in the field of theatre history, including Dennis Kennedy for his early support and continual nudging. Greatly appreciated. In addition, I offer a special word of thanks to Ed Pechter, who graciously read and commented upon several sections of this book-in-progress. Likewise, Gary Jay Williams, as editor of Theatre Survey, encouraged me to pull together my thoughts on historiography for a review essay, "Writing History Today," on a dozen books (Theatre Survey 41.2: 83–106). I also owe special thanks to Nean Couch, Curator of the Theatre Research Institute at Ohio State University, and Mechele Leon, Department of Theatre and Film at the University of Kansas, for their timely help in procuring some of the illustrations.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-49917-0 - The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

Thomas Postlewait

Frontmatter

More informationx Acknowledgements

To Bruce McConachie I offer, yet again, my thanks and praise. Ever since we worked together on our co-edited book, Interpreting the Theatrical Past (University of Iowa Press, 1989), Bruce has read my work and raised crucial questions, doubts, and alternative perspectives. I also appreciate the comments he passed on to me from his doctoral students at University of Pittsburgh who read several sections (in various draft stages). I am equally indebted to Tracy C. Davis, who last year assigned the full typescript to her doctoral students at Northwestern University. Tracy's summary of her students' responses and her astute comments on my ideas and organization proved invaluable in the final revision. As I know from working with both Tracy and Bruce on several projects, they are the best of scholarly colleagues, for they demand of others what they demand of themselves: the highest standards of scholarship.

Many colleagues have engaged me on historiographical issues and procedures, but I want to give a special nod of respect and gratitude to John Astington, Christopher Balme, Rose Bank, Herb Blau, Michael Booth, Jacky Bratton, Sarah Bryant-Bertail, Marvin Carlson, Sue-Ellen Case, Gay Gibson Cima, Claire Cochrane, Jim Davis, Peter Davis, Joseph Donohue, Richard Dutton, Jody Enders, Jon Erickson, Peter Eversmann, Buck Favorini, Lesley Ferris, Erika Fischer-Lichte, Spencer Golub, Frank Hildy, Peter Holland, Robert D. Hume, Odai Johnson, Peggy Knapp, Michal Kobialka, Pirkko Koski, Kim Marra, David Mayer, Cary Mazer, Judith Milhous, Janelle Reinelt, Joseph Roach, Freddie Rokem, Eli Rozek, Willmar Sauter, Virginia Scott, Laurence Senelick, Brian Singleton, Ron Vince, David Wiles, Simon Williams, Steve Wilmer, Barry Witham, Bill Worthen, and Yael Zahry-Levo. No doubt I have failed to credit some colleagues, but the Works cited section of this book provides a fuller register of my obligations and appreciations.

There are, of course, many different ways to write theatre history. No one has the final word. The continuing vitality of the field is most evident for me in my editorial work. Since 1991 I have edited a book series, "Studies in Theatre History and Culture," at the University of Iowa Press. I have been amazingly fortunate to have the support and guidance of the two Directors of the press – the wry Paul Zimmer, followed by the sagacious Holly Carver. Besides the invaluable opportunity to work closely with scholars from around the world, the editing has taught me much about not only the diversity and complexity of theatre history as a discipline but also the many possible methods and approaches that historians can apply successfully. This understanding has guided my editorial work at Iowa, beginning with Interpreting the Theatrical Past (1989), which I edited with Bruce McConachie. Two decades later the same commitment to multiple viewpoints has led to yet another Iowa book on theatre historiography, Representing the Past (2009), which I co-edited with Charlotte Canning. In between these two collections of essays on the historiography of performance, I have been able to publish thirty-five books in my series, written on an amazingly wide range of topics by theatre scholars from ten different countries. My debt to the Iowa writers, one and all, is profound. Many of their methods and ideas are woven into the texture of this introductory book.

In addition to the many benefits I have received during the last two decades from friends, colleagues, journals, presses, institutions, and even strangers, I owe my

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-49917-0 - The Cambridge Introduction to Theatre Historiography

Thomas Postlewait

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgements xi

deepest gratitude to my wife, Marilyn L. Brownstein. I do not need to name and praise her special qualities; nor is it necessary to catalogue my abiding appreciation for her many contributions as partner and scholar (and editor of this editor). She knows. It is sufficient to say that together we have been able to shape and serve our mutual interests, commitments, careers, and goals. Thank you; you're the perfect postmodernist for my antiquarian personality. What a great adventure it has been – from Boston to Athens, Georgia, from Columbus, Ohio to Whidbey Island.

Finally, I offer my heartfelt appreciation to my graduate students, including those who took seminars with me on theatre history and historiography at Georgia, Indiana, Ohio State University, and now Washington. I extend my special regard (but no more marginal comments and demands for revision) to the two dozen students who wrote their theses and dissertations with me. This book is for all of you.