

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51386-9 - Emerging Multinationals in Emerging Markets

Edited by Ravi Ramamurti and Jitendra V. Singh

Index

More informationIndex

- 24/7 Customer 138–139
- ABSA 268, 270
- Acusis 138–139
- Africa, market for technology 85–86
- aircraft manufacturing, use of the demand wedge by China 106–108
- Alrosa 182
- AmBev/InBev 227–228, 229–230, 240
- Amoi 94
- Anglo American Corporation 245–246,
253–256, 263–266
- Arcelor-Mittal 140
- Asian countries, World Bank
categorization 54
- Asian MNEs, regional sales 55, 56, 57
- Asian MNEs and the FSA/CSA matrix
51, 56–59
- Chinese MNEs 51, 57–59
- impacts of offshoring and outsourcing 59
- Korean MNEs 51, 58
- Aveng 271–272
- AVIC (Aviation Industries of China)
107–108
- AvtoVAZ 187–188
- Bank Hapoalim 369–370
- Bank Leumi 369–370
- Basovyi Element 181, 187–188
- Bellwave (Korea) 94
- Bharat Forge 143
- Bharat Petroleum 116
- BHPBilliton 253
- Black Economic Empowerment firms in South Africa 273
- ‘born global’ Israeli MNEs 361–362,
370–374, 387–388
- Boston Consulting Group (BCG) 3
- Braskem (Odebrecht Group) 220
- Brazilian EMNEs
local institutional environment 210
- Mercosur experience 210–211
- overall view 211, 212–214
- Brazilian industry in the twentieth century
1900–1950, before the first wave
201–202
- 1950s industrialization project
202–203
- 1960s and 1970s 203–205
- creation of Mercosur 208–209
- creation of SOEs 202
- economic growth in the 1950s
202–203
- efforts to establish a Brazilian IT industry 205
- establishment of the aerospace
industry (1960s) 205
- establishment of the petrochemical
industry (1960s) 204–205
- exhaustion of the import substitution model (1975–1990) 206
- FDI in the 1950s 202–203
- industrial restructuring in the 1990s
207–209
- infrastructure projects (1960s and 1970s) 204
- “lost decade” of the 1980s 206, 207
- performance in post WWII waves of internationalization 200
- privatization of SOEs in the 1990s
208–209
- Brazilian MNE case studies 215–236
- basic input supplier MNEs 220–224
- construction supplier MNEs
224–226
- consumer goods MNEs 226–230
- Coteminas 228–230

- Brazilian MNE case studies (cont.)
 CSN (Companhia Siderurgica Nacional) 220–221, 223–224
 CVRD (Companhia Vale do Rio Doce) 217–220
 Duratex 225, 226
 Embraer 233–235, 236
 equipment supplier MNEs 230–233
 Gerdau 221–224
 InBev/AmBev 227–228, 229–230
 Marcopolo 235–236
 Petrobras 215–217, 219–220
 resource-based MNEs 215–220
 Sabo 231, 233
 summary of CSAs and FSAs 237–240, 238
 systems assembler MNEs 233–236
 Tigre 224–225, 226
 WEG 231–233
- Brazilian MNE CSAs and FSAs basic input suppliers 223–224 construction suppliers 226 consumer goods producers 229–230 equipment suppliers 233
 resource-based firms 219–220
 summary of analysis 237–240
 systems assemblers 236
- Brazilian MNE internationalization strategies global first-movers 240–241 global/regional consolidators 240 global value chain climbers 241
 local optimizers 240
- business groups, POEs 66–68
 business process outsourcing, to Indian EMNEs 134–139
BusinessWeek, reporting on EMNEs 3
 BYD (China) 84–85, 86
- Canada, history of MNEs 43
 capital shyness in developing countries 70–72
 Celtel 34–35
 CEMEX (Mexico) 3, 8–9
 global consolidator 140
 CEMEX case study 282, 289–301
 accelerating internationalization 295–298 consolidating the CEMEX Way (internal benchmarking) 295–298 core competencies generated at home 290–292 drivers for international expansion 292–294
 extending the theory of EMNEs 301–306
 laying the groundwork for internationalization 290–292
 Post Merger Integration (PMI) process 294, 295–298 stepping out 292–294
 stepping up 298–301
 Charoen Pokphand (CP) group, case study 322–325, 326
 Check Point Software Technologies Ltd. 380–383
- China
 FDI as agent of economic development 52–53
 lack of FSA development in large Chinese firms 53–54
 China International Marine Containers (CIMC) 84–85, 88
 China National Offshore Oil Corporation see CNOOC
 China National Petroleum Corporation 106
 Chinese MNE cost innovation examples 84–85 expanding niche segments into volume markets 83–84 from CSAs to FSAs 82–85
 growing investment in R&D 84
 high technology at low cost 83
 reducing break-even point on specialty products 83–84 share of high-technology exports 84
 strategies 83–91
 wide product choice or customization at mass-market prices 83
- Chinese MNE gateways to entry 91–99 codification of knowledge 94 concentration and internationalization of retailing 95–96

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51386-9 - Emerging Multinationals in Emerging Markets

Edited by Ravi Ramamurti and Jitendra V. Singh

Index

More information

Index

429

- de-integration of global value chains 92–93
- global market for talent and professional services 96–99
- learning global best practice 98–99
- mergers and acquisitions 97–98
- modular products and services 93–94
- modularization of global value chains 93–94
- opening up of the market for corporate control 97–98
- outsourcing by established MNEs 92–93
- use of buying power of Chinese companies 99
- Chinese MNE globalization strategies
  - global consolidator strategy 87–88, 96, 99, 101
  - global first-mover strategy 88–91, 95, 99, 101–102
  - leveraging cost innovation advantages 85–91
  - local optimizer strategy 85–86, 94, 101–102
  - low-cost partner strategy 86–87, 93, 94
  - use of the demand wedge 104–108
- Chinese MNE weaknesses 99–104
  - immature industries 101–102
  - intangible assets 103–104
  - lack of strong brands 103–104
  - limitations of cost innovation early in the product life cycle 101–102
  - limitations of small Chinese and developing markets 100–101
  - systemic network businesses 102–103
- Chinese MNEs 44–45
  - aircraft manufacturing 106–108
  - application of the FSA/CSA matrix, 51, 57–59
  - CSAs 82–83
  - high-profile examples 81, 84–85
  - involvement in the Three Gorges Dam project 105–106
  - petrochemicals industry 106
  - regional sales 55, 56, 57
  - reshaping global competition 108–109
  - widespread state ownership 82–83
- Chint 86
- CIMC (China International Marine Containers) 84–85, 88
- CNOOC (China National Offshore Oil Corporation) 8
- Cognizant 138–139
- Companhia Siderurgica Nacional see CSN
- Companhia Vale do Rio Doce see CVRD
- competitive advantages of EMNEs 402–410
  - adversity advantage 409
  - CSAs 402–404
  - FSAs 404–410
  - privileged access to resources and markets 407–408
  - production and operational excellence 407
  - products suited to emerging markets 405–406
  - traditional intangible assets 409–410
- Comstar-UST 183
- context, relevance to theories of EMNEs 11–16, 420–423
- Coteminas 228–230, 241
- country-specific advantages (CSAs) of EMNEs 50, 402–404, see also internalization theory
- CSN (Companhia Siderurgica Nacional) 220–221, 223–224
  - establishment of 202
  - privatization 208–209
- CVRD (Companhia Vale do Rio Doce) 32, 217–220
  - establishment of 202
  - global consolidator strategy 240
  - privatization 208–209
- Dawning
  - access to new knowledge 94–95
  - high technology at low cost 83
- De Beers 245–246, 253
- de-colonization, impacts on developing countries 68–73
- Delek 370
- Delta Galil 369
- demand wedge, Chinese MNE globalization strategy 104–108

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51386-9 - Emerging Multinationals in Emerging Markets

Edited by Ravi Ramamurti and Jitendra V. Singh

Index

More information

430

Index

- developing countries
  - capabilities of POEs 66–68
  - capital shyness 70–72
  - contribution of POEs to economic development 65–68
  - expulsion of colonial companies after independence 70
  - impacts of de-colonization 68–73
  - impacts of FDI 64–65
  - national ownership in the service sector 73–74
  - need to have their own companies 64–65
  - POEs vs. FOEs 64–65
  - sources of manufacturing experience 69–70
- Dimension Data 266
- Dor Alon 370
- Dr. Reddy's Laboratories 119, 120, 122
  - multiple internationalization strategies 152–154
- Dubai Ports World 34–35
- Duratex 225, 226
  - local optimizer strategy 240
- Economist*, reporting on EMNEs 3
- Elbit 361–362, 370
- Electra 370
- Elite 370
- Elron 361–362, 374
- Elscint 361–362, 374
- Embraer 3, 8–9, 233–235, 236
  - entrepreneurship 65
  - establishment of 205
  - global first-mover strategy 240–241
  - local optimizer to global first-mover 157
  - privatization 208–209
- Emcure Pharmaceuticals 138–139
- EMNE (emerging-market multinational enterprise) literature review 313–316
- IDP model 313–314
  - nature of outward FDI from developing countries 313–314
  - perspectives on competitive advantages of EMNEs 314–316
  - types of FDI based on host-location advantages 314
- EMNE internationalization strategies
  - impacts on global competition 416–417
  - responses by Western MNEs 416–417
- EMNE research
  - early work see Third World multinationals
  - insights for IB theory 401, 418–423
  - sample of countries 17, 18
- EMNE research questions 6, 10
  - competitive advantages and capabilities 10–12
  - impact on global industry dynamics 10
  - internationalization strategies 10, 12–16
- EMNE research questions and existing IB theories 6, 10–16
  - home-country context 6, 14
  - industry context 14
  - insights for IB theory 401, 418–423
  - issues at different stages of internationalization 14–15
  - notion of “liabilities of foreignness” 10–11
- Ownership-Location-Internationalization (OLI) framework 10–11
- product cycle hypothesis 13–14
- relevance of context 11–16
- stages model of internationalization 10–11, 13
- temporal context 15–16
- theory of motivations for internationalization 10–11
- EMNEs (emerging-market multinational enterprises)
  - as a long-term trend 4
  - attraction for financial investors 9
  - consequences of late globalization 400–401
  - country- and industry-level approach 4–5
  - disruptive effects on their global industries 8–9
  - future economic and political risks 9–10
  - future potential 9–10
  - impacts of recent trend in 3

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51386-9 - Emerging Multinationals in Emerging Markets

Edited by Ravi Ramamurti and Jitendra V. Singh

Index

More information

Index

431

- place in international business (IB) theory 4
- potential to displace global giants 9
- profitability and return on investment 9
- up-market FDI 400–401
- Evaluserve 138–139
- evolutionary perspective on organizations 160–161
- Evrax 181, 182, 187
- Exxaro Resources 273
- firm-specific advantages (FSAs), definition 50, see also internalization theory
- firm-specific advantages (FSAs) of EMNEs 404–410
  - adversity advantage 409
  - privileged access to resources and markets 407–408
  - production and operational excellence 407
  - products suited to emerging markets 405–406
  - traditional intangible assets 409–410
- First Auto Works 65
- First Pacific 37
- Flextronics, transition beyond low-cost partner 157
- foreign-owned enterprises (FOEs)
  - bureaucracy 65
  - contribution to local economic development 64–65
  - crowding out of local POEs 64–65
  - joint ventures with POEs 67
- foreign direct investment (FDI)
  - as agent of economic development in China 52–53
  - between developing countries 6–7
  - crowding out of local POEs 64–65
  - from developing to advanced countries 6, 7–9
  - outward larger than inward in India 112–113
  - research on directions of global flows 5–10, 6
  - South–North investment 7–9
  - South–North investment by Indian EMNEs 110, 112, 113, 125
  - South–South investment 6–7
  - up-market FDI by EMNEs 7–9, 110, 112, 113, 400–401
- Galanz 84–85
- GAZ 187–188
- Gazprom 3, 172, 174–175, 180, 181–182
- Gazpromneft 181–182
- generic internationalization strategies of EMNEs 410–416
  - strategic space occupied by EMNEs 415–416, see also global consolidator strategy; global first-mover strategy; local optimizer strategy; low-cost partner strategy; natural-resource vertical integrator strategy
- Gerdau 221–224
  - global value chain climber strategy 241
  - regional consolidator strategy 240
- global competition, impacts of EMNEs internationalization strategies 416–417
- global (or regional) consolidator strategy 414–415
  - Chinese MNEs 87–88, 96, 99, 101
  - impacts on global competition 416
  - Indian EMNEs 113, 140–142, 143–146
- global (or regional) first-mover strategy 415
  - Brazilian MNEs 240–241
  - Chinese MNEs 88–91, 95, 99, 101–102
  - examples 157–158
  - impacts on global competition 416
  - Indian EMNEs 113, 146–152
- Goodbaby, wide product choice at mass-market prices 83
- GVK Biosciences 138–139
  - low-cost partner strategy 152–153
- Haier 81
  - benefits from consolidation of global retailing 95–96
  - entry into the US mass market 95–96
  - reducing break-even point on specialty products 83–84

- Hindalco 113, 140, 143–145
 acquisition of Novelis 143, 145
- Hindustan Petroleum 116
- HiSense 85–86
- home-country context of EMNEs 6, 14, 420–422
- Huawei 3, 8–9, 81
 access to new knowledge 94–95
 global first-mover strategy 88–91, 94–95 investment in process and management consultancy 98–99
- Hyundai 67
- IB theory see international business (IB) theory
- Ilim Pulp 183
- Imperial Holdings 272–273
- InBev/AmBev 227–228, 229–230, 240
- Inca Kola 30–31, 35
- India
 capital shyness 70–72
 distinctive characteristics 111–112, 113
- Indian EMNE internationalization
 strategies 111–112, 124–128
- Arcelor-Mittal (global consolidator)
 140
- business process outsourcing
 134–139
- combining or morphing across generic strategies 152–154
- evolutionary perspective on organizations 160–161
- firms with untapped
 internationalization potential 133
- global (or regional) consolidator generic strategy 113, 140–142, 143–146
- global first-mover generic strategy
 113, 146–152
- Hindalco (global consolidator) 113,
 143–145
- in the 1960s and 1970s 124–125
- Infosys (low-cost partner) 136–138, 139
- issues in the early stages 125–128
- knowledge process outsourcing
 134–139
- local optimizer generic strategy 113,
 128–133
- local optimizer to global first-mover 157
- low-cost partner generic strategy
 134–139
- Mahindra & Mahindra (local optimizer) 131–133
- non-Indian examples 157–158
- pathways for strategy migration
 154–156
- relation to IB theoretical concepts and insights 159–161
- sources of competitive advantage
 125–128
- South–North investments 125
- state-owned energy firms 124
- Suzlon Energy (global first-mover)
 147–152
- transition beyond low-cost partner 157
- Wipro (low-cost partner) 136–138,
 139
- Indian EMNEs
- Boston Consulting Group (BCG)
 rankings 117, 119, 120, 122
- effects of policy and technological changes 115–116
- EPW Research Foundation rankings
 117, 119, 120, 122
- Fortune 500 rankings 116, 117
- India Brand Equity Foundation 117, 119
- industry sector clusters 122–123
- predominance of private firms 123
- rankings in lists of top firms
 116–124, 117
- Software Engineering Institute certification 137
- sources of comparative advantage
 123
- SOEs 116, 123–124
- UNCTAD rankings 116–119
- Indian firms
- comparison of first and second waves of outward FDI 113–116

- larger outward than inward FDI 112–113
- South–North FDI flows 110, 112, 113
- up-market FDI 110, 112, 113
- waves of expansion 110
- Indian Oil Corporation 116
- Indofood Sukses Makmur 31, 35, 37
- Indonesia, CSAs 54
- industry context of EMNEs 14, 422
- Infosys 8–9, 136–138, 139
- Ingosstrakh 184
- internationalization theory and EMNEs
  - applying the FSA/CSA matrix to Asian MNEs 56–59
  - CSAs 50–51
  - FSA/CSA matrix 51–52
  - FSAs 50–51
  - lack of FSA development in large Chinese firms 53–54
  - Porter’s diamond model 51
  - relevance of the theory 61
- international business (IB) theory, and generic internationalization strategies 159–161
- international business (IB) theory
  - applied to EMNEs 6, 10–16
  - competitive advantages of EMNEs 402–410
  - home-country context 6, 14, 420–422
  - industry context 14, 422
  - insights from the study of EMNEs 401, 418–423
  - issues at different stages of internationalization 14–15
  - macro international environment 423
  - notion of “liabilities of foreignness” 10–11
  - Ownership-Location-Internationalization (OLI) framework 10–11
  - product cycle hypothesis 13–14
  - relevance of context 11–16, 420–423
  - stages model of internationalization 10–11, 13
  - temporal context 15–16
  - theory of motivations for internationalization 10–11, see also theoretical aspects of EMNEs; theory of MNEs
- internationalization, issues at different stages 14–15, see also generic internationalization strategies
- Investment Development Path (IDP) model 112–113
- Iscar 361–362, 369
- Israel
  - changes in economic policies since 1985 358–360
  - changes in management style and attitudes 360–364
  - changes in the country’s business elite 360–364
  - cultural CSAs 364
  - historical context 354–358
  - issues related to FDI 388–389
  - public policy issues 388–391
  - security considerations related to FDI 389–391
  - spreading risk across a number of firms 389
  - waning commitment to nationalist ideals 386–387
- Israel Aerospace Industries (IAI) 370
- Israel Chemicals 368–369
- Israeli MNEs
  - access to capital 374–375
  - acquisition by giant multinationals 375–376, 379
  - application of Porter’s diamond model 352–353
  - Bank Hapoalim 369–370
  - Bank Leumi 369–370
  - born global case study (Check Point Software Technologies Ltd.) 380–383
  - capacity to create new assets or resources 383–384
  - challenges to traditional IB theory 352–354
  - characteristics of born globals 387–388
  - Check Point Software Technologies Ltd. 380–383

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51386-9 - Emerging Multinationals in Emerging Markets

Edited by Ravi Ramamurti and Jitendra V. Singh

Index

More information

434

Index

- Israeli MNEs (cont.)
 cultural CSAs 364
 definition of an Israeli MNE
 390–391
 Delek 370
 Delta Galil 369
 Dor Alon 370
 Elbit 361–362, 370
 Electra 370
 Elite 370
 Elron 361–362, 374
 Elscint 361–362, 374
 FDI comparison with Finland 377
 FDI comparison with Ireland
 377–378
 firms which are born global 370–374 first “born global” firms 361–362 growth through diversification 384 influence of DBIC (Discount Bank Investment Company) 361–362 influence of the new managers 360–364
 ingredients of a successful strategy 383–388
 internationalization processes
 370–374
 involvement in the domestic market
 383
 Iscar 361–362, 369
 Israel Aerospace Industries (IAI) 370
 Israel Chemicals 368–369
 issues about FDI 388–389
 key drivers for success (Teva example) 364–367, 368
 lessons from the Israeli experience
 383–388
 Makhteshim-Agan Industries Ltd.
 369
 Netafim 369
 Ormat 370
 outward FDI 368–379
 ownership and control issues
 389–391
 pioneers and innovators 360–364
 public policy issues 388–391
 Scitex 361–362, 373–374
 security considerations related to
 FDI 389–391
 size in relation to the home market 384 strategies in a small open economy 385 sustainable competitive advantage
 385–386
 Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd.
 364–367, 368
 waning commitment to nationalist ideals 386–387
- Japan, CSAs 54–55
 joint ventures between FOEs and POEs 67
- Kiroloskar 7
 knowledge process outsourcing, to
 Indian EMNEs 134–139
- Konka 94
- Korea, CSAs 54–55
- Korean MNEs, application of the FSA/
 CSA matrix, 51, 58
- late globalization, consequences for EMNEs 400–401
- Lenovo 8, 81
 acquisition of IBM’s PC business 35, 58–59, 88, 97–98
 acquisition of Packard Bell 88 brand-building and PR contract 98–99
 global consolidator 140
 “liabilities of foreignness” notion 10–11
- local optimizer strategy 413
 Brazilian MNEs 240
 Chinese MNEs 85–86, 94,
 101–102
 impacts on global competition 416
 Indian EMNEs 113, 128–133
 transition to global first mover 157
- low-cost partner strategy 413–414
 Chinese MNEs 86–87, 93, 94
 impacts on global competition 416
 Indian EMNEs 134–139
 transition beyond 157
- LukOil 8, 182
- macro international context and theories of EMNEs 423
- Magna International 181, 187–188
- Mahindra & Mahindra 131–133

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-51386-9 - Emerging Multinationals in Emerging Markets

Edited by Ravi Ramamurti and Jitendra V. Singh

Index

More informationIndex

435

- Makhteshim-Agan Industries Ltd. 369
 Malaysia, CSAs 54
 Marcopolo 235–236, 240–241
 McKinsey & Company 3, 98–99
 Megafon 183
 Mercosur 208–209, 210–211
 Mexican MNEs see CEMEX
 Mittal Steel 8, 37
 MNE (multinational enterprise), definition 44
 mobile phone handset market entry by Chinese firms 93–94 lack of Chinese penetration early on 101
 MTC (Kuwait) 34–35
 MTN Group (South Africa) 253,
 263–265, 268–269, 271
 MTS (Russia) 183
 Murray and Roberts 272
- natural-resource vertical integrator strategy 413
 impacts on global competition 416
 Netafim 369
 Nicholas Piramal 138–139
 Nine Dragons Paper (China), global consolidator 145–146
 Ningbo Bird 94
 Nokia 68
 Norilsk Nickel 181, 182
- OfficeTiger 138–139
 offshoring, impacts of 59
 Ogilvy & Mather 98–99
 Oil and Natural Gas Corporation
 116–119
 Old Mutual 253–256, 263–265, 267
 Oppenheimer, Ernest 245–246
 Ormat 370
 outsourcing, impacts of 59
 Ownership-Location-
 Internationalization (OLI) framework 10–11
 ownership of firms see foreign-owned enterprises; privately owned enterprises
- Oxiteno (Ultra Group) 220
- Packages Ltd. 28, 31, 35
 Pearl River Piano Group 84–85
 employment of foreign experts 96–97
 Petrobras 215–217, 219–220
 establishment of 202, 204–205
 global consolidator strategy 240
 government shareholding 208–209, 216–217
 internationalization process 216–217 loss of monopoly in Brazil 216 public trading of shares 216–217 petrochemicals, use of the demand wedge by China 106
 Porter's diamond model 51
 application to Israeli MNEs 352–353 privately owned national enterprises
 (POEs)
 assembly capabilities 68
 business groups 66–68
 comparison with conglomerates 72–73
 crowding out by FOEs 64–65
 diversification into the service sector 73–74
 diversification strategy 66–68
 dynamic entrepreneurship 65 factors affecting market power 64 fast transmission of information 65–66
 impacts of de-colonization 68–73
 inter-sectoral learning 67 joint ventures with FOEs 67 knowledge-based assets 67–68 mobility of resources 67
 project execution skills 66–68 reasons for the diversified group business model 70–73
 short time to market 65–66, 68 space to flourish after decolonization 70
 speed of decision making 67
 Procter & Gamble 352
 product cycle hypothesis 13–14
 PTT Public Company Limited (PTT), case study 322–323, 331–334
- Ranbaxy, multiple internationalization
 strategies 152–153
- Relevance, Appropriability, Transferability (RATs) test of capabilities for international expansion 281, 301–303

- Reliance Industries 116
- Rosneft 172, 174–175, 181–182
- Rosoboronexport 171, 184
- Ruentex 74
- Russian economy
  - abundance of natural resources 169–171
  - control of inflation 168, 169
  - dominance of the energy sector 169–171
  - FDI 168
  - foreign trade surplus 168
  - GDP growth under President Putin 168–169
  - national champions in natural resource sectors 175–176
  - nationalization of companies 171–173
  - oligarchic capitalist period 171–172, 174
  - privatization under President Yeltsin 171–172
  - role of the government under President Putin 171–173
  - strength of the currency 168, 169
  - trading partners 176–177
- Russian MNE global strategies
  - consolidation of the domestic market 190
  - effects of government involvement on competitiveness 193–194
  - implications for Japanese MNEs 191
  - implications for natural resource-based MNEs 191–192
  - implications for natural resource-reliant MNEs 191
  - implications for non-natural resource-based MNEs 192–193
  - implications for Western MNEs 191
  - importance of diversification for sustainability 189–190
  - issue of credibility as reliable suppliers 191
  - lessons for MNEs in other emerging economies 189–191
  - partnering opportunities for other countries' MNEs 192–193
  - possible actions of Russian public policy makers 193–194
  - potential to destabilize world commodity markets 191–192
  - raw materials pricing power of Russian MNEs 191
  - recruitment of foreign executive expertise 190–191
- Russian MNEs
  - access to technology and expertise 181
  - arms and weapons sector 184, 189
  - corporate goals 180–181
  - financial-industrial groups (FIGs) 174
  - government ownership and control 171–173
  - growth strategies for building international presence 181–184
  - impacts on global market dynamics 187–189
  - industry sectors 177–180
  - M&As 181–184
  - numbers of 167
  - origins in the 1990s privatization era 174–176
  - political power and influence 188–189
  - predominance of the natural resources sector 177–180
  - siloviki capitalism 175–176
  - state ownership in the major sectors 177–180
  - support from Putin government economic strategy 176–177
  - sustainability of competitive advantages 184–187
  - Yukos affair (2004) 172
- S&P group (Thailand), case study 322–323, 330–331
- SABMiller 253–256, 263–265, 266–267
  - global consolidator 140
- Sabo 231, 233, 241
- Samsung, entrepreneurship 65
- Sappi 263–265
- Sasol 246, 253, 267, 273
- Sberbank 183–184
- SCG (Siam Cement Group), case study 322–323, 325–330, 329
- Scitex 361–362, 373–374

- Severstal 181, 182, 187
- Shanghai Zhenhua Port Machinery Company 84–85
- Shoprite 268
- siloviki capitalism 175–176
- Singapore, CSAs 54
- Sinopec, use of the demand wedge 106
- Sistema 183
- South Africa, unique aspects of the EMNE landscape 244
- South African Breweries see SABMiller
- South African firms, Black Economic Empowerment firms 273
- South African MNE historical context 245–249
- actions of the Afrikaner Nationalist government 246
  - coexistence of two distinct economies 246
  - creation of SOEs 246
  - De Beers 245–246
  - diamond industry 245–246
  - distinct characteristics of domestic firms 248–249
  - diversification of conglomerates 246–248
  - founding of Anglo American Corporation 245–246
  - gold mining 245–246
  - impacts of the end of apartheid (1994) 248–249
  - impacts of the introduction of apartheid 246–248
  - unbundling of conglomerates at the end of apartheid 248–249
- South African MNE internationalization and IB theory 261–263
- competitive advantages 261–263
  - conditions in local and global markets 262–263
  - country-specific location advantages 262
  - country-specific political advantages 262
  - firm-specific ownership advantages 261–262
  - historical and personal relationships 262
- South African MNE internationalization strategies 263–273
- extensive internationalization and entry into developed-country markets 263–267
  - mixed internationalization 270–273
  - regional multinationalization 268–270
- South African MNE patterns of
- outward FDI (since 1994) 249–257
  - aggregate stocks and flows 250, 251
  - geographic distribution 250–253
  - limitations of available data 252–253
  - M&As 253–257
  - mode of entry 253–257
  - problem of defining a South African firm 249–250
- South African MNEs in the global economy
- analysis 257, 258, 259, 260
  - general trends 257–259
  - stages model of internationalization 10–11, 13
- Standard Bank 268, 270
- State Bank of India 116
- strategic space occupied by EMNEs 415–416
- Taiwan
- CSAs 54–55
  - national ownership in the service sector 73–74
- Tata Consultancy Services 3, 8–9, 37–38
- low-cost partner strategy 152
- Tata Group
- entrepreneurship 65
  - range of internationalization strategies 152
- Tata Motors, local-optimizer strategy 152
- Tata Sons and Company, raising capital 71–72
- Tata Steel 8, 140
- global consolidator strategy 143, 152
- Tata Tea, global consolidator strategy 152
- TCL (China) 94, 140

- TechFaith, access to new knowledge 94–95
- Telkom 268–269
- temporal context of internationalization 15–16
- Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. 364–367, 368
- Thai MNE case studies 322–323
- case comparisons 334–343
- Charoen Pokphand (CP) group 322–325, 326
- efficiency-seeking FDI 337–338
- generic networking capabilities 340–343
- geographical spread 334–337
- industry-specific technological skills 339–340
- market-seeking FDI 337
- motives for FDI 329, 333, 337–339
- nature of competitive advantages 339–343
- PTT Public Company Limited (PTT) 322–323, 331–334
- resource-seeking FDI 329, 333, 338
- S&P group 322–323, 330–331
- Siam Cement Group (SCG) 322–323, 325–330
- strategic asset-seeking FDI 338–339
- Thai MNEs
- competitive advantages 315–316
- future challenges 345–346
- importance of network relationships 315–316
- internationalization strategies 345
- post-crisis phase of emergence 344
- pre-crisis phase of emergence 343–344
- Thai MNEs outward FDI 312
- patterns and trends 316–322
- theoretical aspects of EMNEs
- applying the FSA/CSA matrix to Asian MNEs 56–59
- Chinese MNEs 44–45
- definition of an MNE 44
- effects of foreign MNEs on developing economies 42–44
- EMNEs as leaders of economic development 43–44
- EMNEs within the world's 500 largest firms 44–45
- FDI as agent of economic development in China 52–53
- FSA and CSA of EMNEs 52–53
- home-region orientation of EMNEs 46–50
- influence of FDI 59–60
- intra-regional activities of the world's largest MNEs 45–46
- lack of development of FSAs 61
- MNEs as agents of economic development 52–53
- presence within the world's 500 largest firms 60
- private, family and state-owned firms 43
- process of integration into the world economy 59–60
- relevance of internalization theory 50–52, 61
- small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) 43
- two-way system of inbound and outbound FDI 42–43,
- see also* international business (IB) theory; theory of MNEs; Third World multinationals
- theory of MNEs
- 1960s and 1970s perspectives 284–285
- benefits of going international 283
- capabilities derived from operating in foreign markets 303–304
- challenges from EMNEs 280
- co-evolutionary model of EMNE capabilities 281–282
- continuous capability renewal by EMNEs 303–304
- explanations for the emergence of EMNEs 286–288
- extending the theory of EMNEs 301–306
- framework to explain EMNE emergence and sustainability 301–306
- imprinting effects and inherent EMNE characteristics 305–306
- influence of the international macro context 283
- integration and diffusion of capabilities 304–305

- late 1980s and 1990s perspectives 285–288
- MNEs as knowledge seekers 352–354
- need for competitive advantage 283
- Porter’s diamond model 352–353
- RATs test of capabilities for international expansion 281, 301–303
- risks of going international 283
- sources of competitive advantage 283
- sustainability of EMNEs 288–289
- traditional CSAs 283, 284–285
- traditional FSAs 283, 284–285
- traditional view 280, see also CEMEX case study; international business (IB) theory; theoretical aspects of EMNEs
- theory of motivations for internationalization 10–11
- Third World multinationals (Wells’ early work on EMNEs) 11
  - additional research questions 38–39
  - dated ideas 26–28
  - drive for vertical integration 32
  - drive to diversify home-country risks 32–33
  - drivers of internationalization 31–33
  - early researchers in the field 23–26
  - EMNE internationalization strategy 124–125
  - FDI and the product cycle model 29–30
  - impacts of the demise of import substitution 26–28
  - impacts of the “Washington Consensus” 26–28
  - innovation of products for emerging markets 30–31
  - investments by state-owned or state-controlled firms 33–35
  - new phenomena 33–38
  - new service firms 37–38
  - non-national firms 36–37
  - relocation of the firm’s seat 36
  - search for cheaper labor 28–30
  - servicing of international customers 31–32
  - shortage of marketing and branding skills 30–31
  - small-scale hypothesis 26–28
  - sourcing raw materials abroad 32
  - still-relevant ideas 28–33
  - strategies to obtain marketing skills 35
  - underlying arguments of earlier work 23–26
  - use of foreign affiliates to support exports 32
  - warnings for research in the area 39–41
- Three Gorges Dam project, use of the demand wedge by China 105–106
- Tigre 224–225, 226, 240
- Tracmail 138–139
- UC RusAl 183
- up-market FDI by EMNEs 7–9, 110, 112, 113, 400–401
- VimpelCom 183
- Vodacom 35, 268–269
- Vodaphone 35
- VSMPO-Avisma 175–176
- VTB bank 172, 183
- Wal-Mart, purchase of goods from China 95–96
- Wanxiang 84–85
  - acquisitions and mergers 87
  - expansion of cost and process advantages 87
  - initial focus on universal joint manufacture 86–87
  - outsourcing as gateway to entry 93
  - variety and customization at low cost 86–87
- Wavecom (France) 94
- WEG (Brazil) 231–233, 241
- Wipro 8–9, 136–138, 139
- Wistron, transition beyond low-cost partner 157
- WNS (India) 138–139
- Woolworths Holdings 268
- World Bank, categorization of Asian countries 54
- Xi’an Aircraft Co. 107
- Yukos affair (2004) 172