

EDITOR'S NOTE ON THE INDEXES

For practical reasons, the index has been divided into two parts: a list of names of persons, and an index of geographical places and subjects.

The first index contains the names of all the persons mentioned in the volume. In this volume on the early modern period, the alphabetical order used is, in almost all cases, the family name rather than the Christian or given name. It means that for most of the medieval scholars and personalities as well as for the humanists who are usually better known under their patronymic, the name that features in the alphabetical list is the family name. Cross-references make it easy to find the appropriate entry. Variants of the name are shown in brackets after the entry concerned. Authors' works have not been included in the indexes.

The geographical and subject index has been carefully edited. In other words, the various subjects which appear in the text are not necessarily reproduced as such or under a place-name in the index. Instead, we have preferred to group entries under a more general heading, and we have included only subjects which are directly relevant to the history of universities. Place-names are given in the English form, when this exists, followed by the (modern) country and administrative subdivision (county, Land, province, département, kraj, etc.). For the sake of historical accuracy, the name commonly used at the time is listed. The present place-name or other variants are shown in brackets after the entry concerned.

For all references to individual persons, the reader should consult the name index. In some cases, however, it is also necessary to look to the subject index, as, for instance, for notions such as Aristotelianism, Ramism, Calvinism, Cartesianism, Newtonianism, etc. Wherever possible, people have been identified and places located.

The two indexes have been compiled with the help of Johan Hanselaer in Ghent. We are most grateful to him for his diligent work and his attention to detail.
