

CONTENTS

List of illustrations	ix
List of tables	xii
Preface	xiii
1 Introduction	1
Research objectives Ethnoarchaeology Geographical scope and environment
2 Origins and definitions	9
Historical evidence Theories of nomadic pastoral origins The time frame Nomadic pastoralism defined Hunter-gatherers and nomads compared
3 Nomad pastoral economy	23
Nomadism and the integration of pastoralism and agriculture Factors of production: the pastoral herd The pastoral mode of subsistence
4 Residence, descent and territory	44
Nomad social organization The role of the tribe The tribe as a territorial system Nomadism as a cyclical phenomenon
5 Nomads – the invisible culture?	65
Nomadism as an archaeological problem The organization of nomad material culture The role of pottery in nomad material culture Stone artifacts Stratigraphy and architectural remains The issue of ‘household impedimenta’ Conclusion
6 Nomad architecture and domestic space	84
What is a tent? Types of nomad tents Fixtures Composite dwellings Tents and houses The spatial organization of the tent Indications of wealth and status Towards a typology of dwelling forms Variation in dwelling types over the seasonal cycle Long-term processes influencing dwelling forms
7 Ali’s camp: a nomad household campsite	113
The region Past nomad populations A case study Instability and opportunism in southern Anatolian nomadism Ali’s camp: site structure at the household level Conclusion

Contents

8	The structure and location of nomad settlements Nomad settlement systems The internal structure of nomad campsites The overlap of nomad and sedentary settlement forms Camps and villages Conclusion	133
9	Sarıaydın Yayla The camp and its inhabitants The domestic complex Quantitative analysis of discard Some implications for archeological investigation The domestic complex in context	162
10	The lost world of Nemrut Dağ The setting Initial observations Interpretation of campsite ND-1 The Alikeanlı: an ethnographic account ND-1 in retrospect: an informed reassessment Conclusion	185
11	Nomad archaeology: an assessment Tepe Tula'i Other evidence of possible tentsites The Early Transcaucasian Culture: a test case Future prospects	212
12	Towards a model of unstable settlement systems Theoretical perspectives Comparative and diachronic approaches The future	225
	References	230
	Glossary	245
	Index	248