

Cambridge University Press

052154808X - The Monastic Order in England: A History of its Development from the Times of St Dunstan to the Fourth Lateran Council 940-1216, Second Edition - Dom David Knowles

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS

GLASTONBURY FROM THE AIR	Frontispiece
PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION	page xv
PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION	xvii
LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS	xxiii

Part One. Historical

§ I. Introductory

CHAPTERS I-II

Chap. I. The Rule of Saint Benedict The life of the Rule: the Opus Dei, lectio divina and opus manuum (3); its suitability to the needs of the age (7); its limitations (10); its spirit (14). II. The monastic order between the death of Saint Benedict and the times of Saint Dunstan Cassiodorus, the basilican monasteries and the influence of Gregory the Great (16). Monasticism in England: Augustine and Benet Biscop (21). Benedict of Aniane (25). Cluny, Gorze and Brogne (28).	3 16
---	--------------------

§ II. 940-1066

CHAPTERS III-IV

III. The monastic revival under Dunstan and King Edgar: the Regularis Concordia Disappearance of the monastic life in England, 800-940 (31). The revival under Dunstan, Ethelwold and Oswald (36); the Concordia and its content (42); the period of expansion, 960-990 (48); the three leaders (53). IV. English monasticism between Dunstan and the Conquest The maturity of the revived monasticism: Aelfric and Byrhtferth (57); the monastic bishops (65), new foundations (66) and the missionaries to Scandinavia (67). The monasteries under Cnut (69) and Edward the Confessor (71). Evesham and Worcester (74). The state of the monasteries immediately before the Conquest (78).	31 57
--	---------------------

Cambridge University Press

052154808X - The Monastic Order in England: A History of its Development from the Times of St Dunstan to the Fourth Lateran Council 940-1216, Second Edition - Dom David Knowles

Table of Contents

More information

vi

CONTENTS

§ III. 1066–1100

CHAPTERS V–IX

- V. The Norman monasticism PAGE 83
 The origins of the Norman abbeys: William of Dijon and Fécamp (83). The foundation of Bec (88); Lanfranc (91). Norman and English monasticism compared (92). The intellectual influence of the Norman abbeys (94): Anselm (96) and St Évrroul (97).
- VI. The Norman plantation 100
 The number and wealth of the English monasteries in 1066 (100); their opposition to the Conqueror (103). The character and policy of Lanfranc (107). The appointment of Norman abbots (111); the good abbots (113); disturbances at Glastonbury (114) and St Augustine's (115). Charges against the Normans (117). The new buildings (119) and observance (121); Lanfranc's Consuetudines (123); the new culture (124); the increase in numbers (126).
- VII. The development of the religious life between 1066 and 1100 128
 The new foundations (128). The cathedral monasteries (129). Dependent priories and cells (134). The English nunneries (136). The regular canons before 1100 (139). Death and character of Lanfranc (142).
- VIII. The Cluniacs in England 145
 Cluniac organization under Odilo and Hugh (145); Cluniac observance (148). The foundation of Lewes (151); other foundations (152). Cluniac organization in England (154).
- IX. Worcester, Evesham and the northern revival 159
 Wulfstan, bishop of Worcester (159). Aethelwig, abbot of Evesham (161). The foundation of Odensee (163). The northern revival at Jarrow, Whitby and Durham (165); further development of Durham (169).

§ IV. 1100–1135

CHAPTER X

- X. The English monasteries under Henry I 172
 The monastic life under Henry I (172). Increase of the regular canons (175). Survey of the monasteries of England c. 1120 (176). General conclusions (189).

Cambridge University Press

052154808X - The Monastic Order in England: A History of its Development from the Times of St Dunstan to the Fourth Lateran Council 940-1216, Second Edition - Dom David Knowles

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS

vii

§ V. 1135–1175

CHAPTERS XI–XVI

- | | | |
|-------|--|----------|
| XI. | The new orders | PAGE 191 |
| | The new monastic movement in Italy c. 1000 (191): Romuald and John Gualbert (193); Peter Damian (194). Molesme (198), Tiron and Savigny (200). Grandmont, Fontevault and Prémontré (203). Gilbert of Sempringham (205). | |
| XII. | The new model of Cîteaux | 208 |
| | The constitutional documents (208); the aims of the first fathers (210); federal organization (212); the conversi (216); economic framework (215). Influence of Bernard (217); the Cistercian vocation (219). Collisions between the Cistercians and the black monks (224). | |
| XIII. | The Cistercians in England: I. The first foundations | 227 |
| | The foundations of Tiron and Savigny (227); the new Augustinian houses of the north (229). The exodus from St Mary's, York, to Fountains (231); subsequent history of Fountains, 1132–43 (236). The early history of Rievaulx and the arrival of Ailred, 1132–45 (239). | |
| XIV. | The Cistercians in England: II. The period of expansion | 246 |
| | The families of Rievaulx, Fountains and Waverley (246). Furness, Byland and Jervaulx (249). The Cistercians in public life, 1138–53: Richard of Fountains and Henry Murdac (252). Ailred, abbot of Rievaulx, 1147–67: his character, activities and last days (257). | |
| XV. | The black monks between 1135 and 1175 | 267 |
| | Characteristics of the period (267); sufferings of the monasteries during the reign of Stephen (268); quarrels and lawsuits (272), struggles for exemption and autonomy (274); internal developments (276). A great abbot, Walter de Lucy of Battle (277). | |
| XVI. | Cluniac influence: Henry of Blois and Gilbert Foliot | 280 |
| | The influence of Cluny (280). Foundation of Reading (281); the case of Peterborough (283); other Cluniac abbots (285). The career and character of Henry of Blois (286) and Gilbert Foliot (293). The increase in the religious houses under Stephen (296). | |

KMO

b

§ VI. 1175–1216

CHAPTERS XVII–XXII

- XVII. The black monks from 1175 to 1216 PAGE 299
 Characteristics of the period (299): separation of abbot from community (300), lawsuits (302) and debts (304). Two great abbots: Odo of Battle, 1175–1200 (305) and Samson of Bury, 1182–1211 (306). St Albans and its abbots (309).
- XVIII. The hostility of the bishops towards the black monks 313
 Disorganization in England, 1181–1215 (313); hostility of the clerks towards the monks (314). Career and character of Baldwin (316); his quarrel with the monks of Christ Church (319). Hugh of Nonant and the monks of Coventry (322). The controversy between Hubert Walter and Christ Church (325), and between Savary and Glastonbury (327).
- XIX. The case of Evesham 331
 Appointment of Roger Norreys at Evesham (331); early disturbances (332); the abbey claims exemption in 1202 (335); litigation at Rome, 1204–6 (337); visit of the legate, Nicholas of Tusculum, in 1214 (341).
- XX. The Cistercians from 1153 to 1216 346
 The foundations in Wales (346). Developments in the order: conversi (348), enclosures (350), sheep-farming (352), debts, churches and tithes (354). A saintly abbot: Ralph of Fountains, 1190–1203 (356). Increase of the black canons (359), and of the white (360).
- XXI. The reign of John and the Fourth Lateran Council, 1199–1216 363
 The Canterbury election of 1205–6 (363); sufferings of the Cistercians under John (366). Preparations for the Lateran Council (370); its decrees on union and visitation (373).
- XXII. The Charterhouse of Witham and Hugh of Avalon 375
 The origin of the Carthusians (375); their way of life (377). Foundation of Witham (380); Hugh of Avalon, prior of Witham (382); novices and visitors at Witham: Adam of Dryburgh (384) and Peter of Blois (385). St Hugh as bishop of Lincoln (387).

CONTENTS

ix

Part Two. Institutional§ I. The Interior Polity of the Black Monks

CHAPTERS XXIII–XXV

- XXIII. The office of Abbot PAGE 395
 Election or appointment of the abbot, 970–1216 (395); abnormal cases (402); the machinery of elections (403); deposition of an abbot (403). The separation of abbot from community c. 1100–35 (404). Abbots in public life (406): in the Council (408) and as judges delegate (409).
- XXIV. The internal government and personnel of the monastery 411
 The growth of the powers of the monastic chapter (411); recruitment: oblats and conversi (417); the end of child oblation (421); the noviciate (422). Social status of the recruits (423). Numbers in the black monk houses (425).
- XXV. The administration of the monastery 427
 The officials of the monastery (427); their multiplication and duties (429); the control of revenues: methods of exploitation (431); the “obedientary system” (433); devolution of powers and division of revenues (434); the farming of manors (437). The servants of the monastery (439). Economic organization: the farm-system in kind (441); its commutation to money-rents (443). The monastic borough (444).

§ II. The Work and Influence of the Monks

CHAPTERS XXVI–XXXI

- XXVI. The daily life of the monastery 448
 The horarium (448). The observance of silence (453); introduction of recreative conversation (455). The meals: their number (456) and quality; the eating of flesh-meat (459) at the abbot’s table (460) and by the minuti (461). Articles of food (462) and beverages (464). Baths (465) and fires (466). Manual work: in the Rule (466), Northumbrian monasticism and in the Concordia; its disappearance (467). The sacraments: Mass, the Holy Eucharist (468) and Penance (469). Private prayer (470).

b-2

Cambridge University Press

052154808X - The Monastic Order in England: A History of its Development from the Times of St Dunstan to the Fourth Lateran Council 940-1216, Second Edition - Dom David Knowles

Table of Contents

More information

x

CONTENTS

XXVII. Unions and confraternity: hospitality and charity PAGE 472

Agreements of union: for suffrages (472) and for chapter rights (474). Personal confraternity: during life (475) and ad succurrendum (477). Hospitality: guests (479) and pilgrims (481). Care of the poor (482); relief work (484); hospitals (485).

XXVIII. The intellectual activities of the black monks: I. Educational and literary 487

Monastic schools: from 943 to 1066 (487); in Normandy (490) and in England after the Conquest (491). The literary work; from 970 to the Conquest: Aelfric, Wulfstan and Byrhtferth (492); from the Conquest onwards: the Anglo-Norman culture (495); Symeon of Durham (499), William of Malmesbury (499), the Chronicle (500) and verse composition (501); from 1150 to 1170: St Albans and Bury contrasted (502); from 1170 to 1216: the annals (505) and chronicles (506); Jocelin of Brakelond (507).

XXIX. The intellectual activities of the black monks: II. Theology, canon law, medicine, monastic libraries 509

Theological writings (509): the Immaculate Conception (510). Scripture study: the text of the Vulgate (515). Canon law (516). The study and practice of medicine (516). The work of the scriptorium (518); calligraphy (521). The monastic libraries and their contents (522); the care of books (527).

XXX. The illumination of manuscripts and monastic craft work 528

The illumination of manuscripts: before the Conquest (528); from 1140 to 1180 (532). Monastic arts and crafts: before the Conquest (534) and after (537).

XXXI. The liturgy and the chant 539

The structure of the liturgy (539); the grading of feasts (541); new feasts (542) and various customs and rites (543). The Gregorian chant: in England, 596–750 (547); in Europe, 750–850 (548). The revival under Alfred (551) and Ethelwold (552); after the Conquest (554). Development of the Kyriale (555); tropes (556) and polyphony (558). The organ (559).

§ III. The External Relations of the Monastery

CHAPTERS XXXII–XXXVI

- XXXII. The place of the monastery in the fabric of the Church and of society PAGE 561
- Original isolation of the monasteries (561). Control of all churches by the city-bishop: the Roman conception (562). The northern invasions and the Eigenkirche (564); conditions in the eleventh century (566). The relations of the monastery to the diocesan and to Rome, 451–628 (568); commendation and subjection (569); papal Eigenklöster (570). The ownership of churches by monasteries (572); monastic immunities (573).
- XXXIII. The origins and development of exemption in England 575
- Origins of canonical exemption (575); secular immunities in England before Edward the Confessor (577). The policy of the Confessor (579) and of the Conqueror and Lanfranc (580). Evolution of canonical exemption in the Curia (583); the sum of privileges comprised (585). The growth of exemption in England: from 1100 to 1154 (586); from 1154 to 1189 (587); from 1189 to 1216 (590).
- XXXIV. The monastic churches 592
- Eigenkirchen* in England before the Conquest (592); monastic Eigenkirchen before the Conquest (595) and after (596); development of the pension and vicarage systems (598). Monastic peculiars (600).
- XXXV. The monasteries and the feudal system 607
- The English and Norman monasteries and feudalism before 1066 (607); the introduction of knight-service into England (608); its uneven incidence (610). Wardship of vacant abbacies (612); the abbot's household (615); manorial and honorial courts (616).
- XXXVI. The cathedral monasteries and the bishops' abbeys 619
- Origin of the English cathedral monasteries (619); developments after the Conquest (621). Constitution of Christ Church, Canterbury, Durham, Norwich and other houses (622). Division of the revenues (625); appointment of officials (626); rights of chapters (628); share in diocesan administration (629); quarrels of the twelfth century (630). Two bishops' Eigenklöster: Eynsham and Selby (631).

§ IV. The White Monks

CHAPTER XXXVII

XXXVII. The institutions of the white monks PAGE 632

Organization of the white monks and the black contrasted (632). The white monks: recruitment and the novitiate (634); the abbot and his officials (636); visitations (637) and general chapter (639). The horarium (639) and the dietary (641); silence, prayer and the sacraments (642); literary activity (643); art and architecture (646); the "reform" of the chant (647).

§ V. Monastic Discipline

CHAPTERS XXXVIII–XXXIX

XXXVIII. The maintenance of discipline 649

Original relations between bishop and monastery (649); legatine visitations (651); reintroduction of episcopal visitation (652); the Lateran decrees (653); general judgment on the discipline of the black monks (653). The white monks: activities of general chapter (654) regarding purchase of land and ownership of churches (656); various cases in England (657) and troubles in Wales (659).

XXXIX. The critics of the monks 662

The circle of the clerks (662): Gerald of Wales, his career and character (663); early criticisms of the monks (664) and collision with the Cistercians (665); discussion of his charges (668). Walter Map: his career and character (674); his charges against the Cistercians (676). The satirists: Nigel Wireker (677).

§ VI. Conclusion

CHAPTER XL

XL. Review of the period 940–1216 679

Increase in the number and wealth of the monks between 940 and 1216 (679). Phases of their influence (680). Changes in the conception of the monastic vocation (683); elements of danger: wealth (685), small dependencies (686), entanglement with feudalism (687), customs mitigating the Rule (688). Partial decline in fervour of the Cistercians (689). The spiritual life of the English monks (691); conclusion (692).

Cambridge University Press

052154808X - The Monastic Order in England: A History of its Development from the Times of St Dunstan to the Fourth Lateran Council 940-1216, Second Edition - Dom David Knowles

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS

xiii

Appendices

I. The evidence for the disappearance of monastic life in England before 940 (v. p. 32)	695
II. The status of Glastonbury previous to Dunstan's appointment as abbot c. 940 (v. p. 37)	695
III. The composition of the community at Christ Church, Canterbury, before the Conquest (v. p. 50)	696
IV. Monastic bishops, 960-1066 (v. p. 66)	697
V. The Norman monasteries, 940-1066, with dates of foundation (v. pp. 84 seqq.)	701
VI. The value of the holdings of monasteries and nunneries in Domesday (v. pp. 101, 136)	702
VII. The provenance of foreign superiors appointed to English monasteries, 1066-1135 (v. p. 112)	704
VIII. Date and authorship of the Evesham Chronicle (v. pp. 74, 162)	704
IX. The interventions of St Bernard in English affairs (v. pp. 230 seqq.)	705
X. A list of black monks and regular canons who became Cistercians between 1132 and 1200 (v. p. 268)	706
XI. A list of the Cistercian and Savigniac foundations in England and Wales, 1124-1437 (v. p. 252 et al.)	707
XII. Monastic bishops in England and Wales, 1066-1215 (v. p. 131)	709
XIII. The increase in the number of religious houses in England and Wales, 1100-1175 (v. pp. 190, 297)	711
XIV. The dates of the grants of insignia pontificalia to English abbeys (v. p. 586)	711
XV. Knight-service due from the monasteries according to the cartae of 1166 (v. p. 609)	712
XVI. The officials of a great monastery (v. p. 429)	713
XVII. The numbers of monks in the black monk monasteries (v. p. 425)	713
XVIII. The monastic horarium in winter and summer according to the Regularis Concordia (v. p. 450)	714

Cambridge University Press

052154808X - The Monastic Order in England: A History of its Development from the Times of St Dunstan to the Fourth Lateran Council 940-1216, Second Edition - Dom David Knowles

Table of Contents

More information

xiv	CONTENTS
XIX.	The alleged dietary of St Ethelwold at Abingdon (v. p. 459)	716
XX.	The measures of monastic beverages (v. p. 465)	717
XXI.	Chronological list of abbatial depositions, 1070-1215 (v. p. 654)	718
XXII.	The use of the term Cluniacensis by Gerald of Wales (v. p. 663)	719

Tables

I.	The derivation of the English monasteries, 943-1066 (v. chaps III and IV)	721
II.	The derivation of the Norman abbeys of the eleventh century (v. chap. v)	722
III.	The derivation of the Cluniac houses in England (v. chap. VIII)	723
IV.	The derivation of the English and Welsh Cistercian abbeys (v. chaps XIII, XIV and XX)	724
	(i) The family of Clairvaux	724
	(ii) The family of Aumône	724
	(iii) The family of Savigny	725
	(iv) The family of Fountains	725
	(v) The family of Morimond	726
	(vi) The family of Cîteaux	726
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	727
	ADDITIONAL BIBLIOGRAPHY	745
	ADDITIONAL NOTES	749
	INDEX	761