TRUTH AND PROGRESS

Philosophical Papers, Volume 3

This volume complements two highly successful volumes of Richard Rorty's philosophical papers: Objectivity, Relativism, and Truth and Essays on Heidegger and Others.

The underlying theme of the collection is Rorty's view that we should think of inquiry, in science or any other area of culture, as solving problems rather than as aiming at truth. Only the discredited correspondence theory of truth makes it plausible to think of truth as the name of a goal. Once that notion is given up, we can give up the idea of inquiry converging to a predestined point and consider the horizons of inquiry as constantly expanding as we encounter new problems.

The essays in the volume engage the work of many of today's most innovative thinkers, including Robert Brandom, Donald Davidson, Daniel Dennett, Jacques Derrida, Jürgen Habermas, John McDowell, Hilary Putnam, John Searle, and Charles Taylor. The collection also touches on problems in contemporary feminism raised by Annette Baier, Marilyn Frye, and Catharine MacKinnon, and considers issues connected with human rights and cultural differences.

Anyone with a serious interest in contemporary philosophy and what it can do for us in the modern world will enjoy this invaluable collection.
