ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Critics of autobiography sometimes feel compelled to write autobiographically, just as theorists of comedy sometimes apologize for not being funny. This will not happen here. But the conventional moment when the author intrudes is gratefully accepted here so that I may thank other people.

This work evolved out of my doctoral thesis on Australian autobiography, which I wrote at the Department of English, University of Sydney. I would like to thank the members of the Australian literature section of the department; in particular, my supervisors, Ivor Indyk and Adrian Mitchell. Again, I gratefully acknowledge the financial assistance of an Australian Postgraduate Research Award. I would like to thank my thesis assessors, Brian Kiernan, Chris Wallace-Crabbe, and Joy Hooton, whose comments gave initial direction for this book.

Portions of this book have appeared in different forms in the following publications: Australian and New Zealand Studies in Canada, Southerly, and Distinctive Voices. Thanks go to their editors—Tom Tausky, Ivor Indyk, Dennis Robinson—for their advice in developing this material. A number of people gave help and encouragement during the writing of this book for which I am grateful: Maree Brown, Jenny Ford, Kevin Hart, Dominique Hecq, Bernadette Lingham (an extraordinary librarian), Noel Rowe, Vivian Smith, Peter Steele, Chris Wallace-Crabbe (again), Bob White, my colleagues at Deakin University, and Phillipa McGuinness at Cambridge University Press.
