Acknowledgments

Much of the research for this book was completed while I was a doctoral student in the Department of English, University of Queensland, from 1989 to 1992. I owe the department a debt of gratitude for the support, intellectual and material, it offered me. In particular, Chris Tiffin's seemingly infinite patience, and his unwillingness to allow the passage of glib evasions, has conferred a valuable rigour upon this work. Robert Dixon's kind advice, and the example of his writing, has inspired my interest in nineteenth century Australian culture. To Helen Tiffin I owe my thanks for her efforts in establishing and maintaining postcolonial studies. Alan Lawson, Elizabeth Gee, Laurie Hergenhan, Martin Duwell, Leigh Dale, Chris Lee, Dorothy Seaton, Antoinette Bauer, Susie O'Brien and Delyse Anthony all offered helpful suggestions. Graeme Turner's advice in the early stages of this project, and Bronwy Levy's in its later formation were most valuable.

The later development of this book has taken place at the Australian Catholic University. Its research office has been particularly generous with funds that have made possible much of the research undertaken in the Mitchell Library and the National Library. I am grateful for the assistance of Maureen Strugnell and Mary De Jabrun, and particularly for the optimistic insistence of Louise Edwards.

An early form of part of chapter 3 appeared as 'Exploring Aesthetics: Appropriative Gazing in Journals of Australian Exploration', in Australian Literary Studies 15.4 (October) 1992. A section of chapter 2 appeared as 'Discovering Myths: The Creation of the Explorer in Journals of Exploration', in Australian-Canadian Studies 12.2 (March) 1994. A version of chapter 4 was published as 'Inscribing the Emptiness: Cartography, exploration and the construction of Australia', in Chris Tiffin and Alan Lawson (eds), De-Scribing Empire: Post-colonialism and textuality (London: Routledge, 1994). Parts of chapters 5 and 6 appeared as 'A Word with the Natives: Dialogic Encounters in Journals of Australian Exploration', in Australian and New Zealand Studies in Canada (8) March 1993, and 'The Aborigines in Journals of Australian Exploration', in ARIEL 25.3 (July) 1994. Sections of chapters 4 and 7 were published as "Like a map at our feet": visually commanding the land in journals of Australian exploration', in Southern Review 27.2 (July) 1994, and 'Voyeurs in Space: The Gendered Scopic Regime of Exploration', in Southerly July 1994. The Mitchell Library, State Library of New South Wales, has kindly permitted the reproduction of illustrations.
