316 SUBJECT INDEX

- scope assumptions/conditions (cont.)
 - of exchange theory, 13t, 62, 67, 100
 - of the research project, 71–73, 100–101
 - of the theory of coercion in social exchange, 245–246
- shadow of the future, 26, 163
- simulated actors (in experiments), 85–86, 88–90, 107–108, 198–199, 200–201, 231, 233–234
- social exchange theory, 1, 11–12; see also power-dependence theory
 - exclusion of coercion, 2–3, 43, 44–48
 - implications of the research findings for the theory, 260–264
 - rationale for (and benefits of) including coercion, 48, 262–264
- social relationships, implications for, 268–272
- status quo, 164, 166, 170–171, 251, 254
- status quo bias, 167, 188, 252, 253
- strategies, exchange or power, 15, 35–37, 91, 98, 126–127, 143–145, 160–163, 250–251
 - as adaptive, 163, 250; as purposive, 15, 161, 250, 266
 - punishment (coercive power strategy), 126–134, 200–201, 233–234, 266–267
 - reward withholding (reward power strategy), 18, 128–134, 200–201
 - tit-for-tat (reciprocal), 107, 128, 200–201, 231
- structure, exchange, 20–24, 64–66, 84–85; see also dependence; networks; power
- threats, 51–52, 55–57, 72, 227–228, 278
- transactions, 25–27, 66–67
 - defined, 24, 66
 - independent versus interdependent, 12, 28
 - negotiated versus reciprocal, 4–5, 25–27, 90–91, 275–276
 - one-shot, 12, 28, 47, 51
- uncertainty, see risk and uncertainty
- value, 14, 15–20, 63–65, 73, 82, 246
 - defined, 19
- withdrawal from the relation, 168–169, 171–172, 187–188, 221–222, 267
 - barriers to, 272–273
