There is a deep under-current of republicanism in these colonies, which will some day burst forth and astonish the world.

Acknowledgments

The first third of this book began as a PhD thesis in the Department of Political Science at the University of New South Wales in July 1990. Although most of the book was written in 1994–95, at times it seemed as if publication was becoming like the republic – allegedly inevitable but never managing to arrive. There are many people who helped to make the book a reality. Phillipa McGuinness at Cambridge University Press was consistent in her commitment to its publication. Several colleagues and friends were particularly helpful.

To Conal Condren especially, many thanks for your support and advice over the last five years. I am also indebted to Averil Condren, who kindly offered to perform the difficult task of indexing my work. To George Winterton for your continued encouragement and support, many thanks.

To the staff of the Mitchell Library, Brian Murray at the Parliamentary Library in Canberra, David Clune at the New South Wales Parliamentary Library and Wendy Kelly, thanks for service beyond the call of duty.

Thanks also to David Headon, James Warden, Franca Arena, Neville Wran, Tony Pooley, Michael Ward, Donald Horne and Myfanwy Gollan who all assisted with access to sources at various stages.

Finally, I wish to thank Fiona McKenna. This book could not have been completed without your support.
