

Contents

List of Figures, Tables, and Boxes	page ix
List of Abbreviations	xi
Acknowledgments and Disclaimer	xiii

PART ONE. BACKGROUND

1 Introduction	3
1.1 Globalization	3
1.2 Overview of the Book	6
2 The Evolution of the International Monetary System	13
2.1 The Rise and Fall of International Monetary Regimes, 1870–1945	14
2.1.1 The international gold standard, 15 • 2.1.2 Wartime convertibility restrictions, 18 • 2.1.3 Free floating, 19 • 2.1.4 A gold-exchange standard, 22 • 2.1.5 An uncoordinated hybrid system, 24 • 2.1.6 Managed floating, 26 • 2.1.7 Arrangements during World War II, 27
2.2 The Bretton Woods System: 1946–1971	27
2.2.1 Creation of the IMF and World Bank, 27 • 2.2.2 Adjustment and collapse: The power of internationally mobile capital, 29
2.3 The Prevailing International Monetary System	35
2.3.1 Amendment of the agreement governing exchange rate arrangements, 35 • 2.3.2 European monetary integration, 37 • 2.3.3 Salient characteristics of the exchange rate system, 42 • 2.3.4 Agenda setting and international policy coordination, 52

vi	Contents
2.4	Liberalized Finance and the Sea Change in International Capital Flows 54
2.5	Concluding Perspectives 65
3	The International Monetary Fund 69
3.1	Purposes and Activities 69
3.2	Organizational and Decision-Making Structures 70
3.3	Surveillance 73
	3.3.1 Country surveillance: Core activities and policy advice, 74 • 3.3.2 Country surveillance: New directions since the mid-1990s, 78 • 3.3.3 Global and regional surveillance, 86
3.4	Lending and Economic Stabilization Programs 87
	3.4.1 Lending policies and facilities, 88 • 3.4.2 Program design and conditionality, 94
3.5	Technical Assistance and Research 103
3.6	Criticisms of the IMF 105
3.7	Concluding Perspectives 112
	PART TWO. INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL CRISES AND OBSTACLES TO GROWTH
4	Factors Contributing to International Financial Crises 119
4.1	Historical and Conceptual Perspectives 119
4.2	Selected Crises of the 1990s: Contributing Factors and Initial Stages 131
	4.2.1 Mexico, 1994–1995, 132 • 4.2.2 Thailand, 1997, 136 • 4.2.3 Indonesia, 1997–1998, 139 • 4.2.4 Korea, 1997–1998, 142 • 4.2.5 Malaysia, 1997–1998, 144 • 4.2.6 Russia, 1998, 146 • 4.2.7 Brazil, 1998–1999, 148 • 4.2.8 Sources of vulnerability and common characteristics, 150
4.3	IMF Influence During Precrisis Periods 152
4.4	Concluding Perspectives 159
5	The Effects of Crises and Controversies Over How to Respond 162
5.1	The Sudden Stop Phenomenon 162
5.2	Contagion 172
5.3	Controversies Over the Macroeconomic and Structural Policy Responses 175

Contents	vii
5.3.1 Exchange rate arrangements, 176 • 5.3.2 Interest rate policies, 178 • 5.3.3 Fiscal adjustment, 183 • 5.3.4 Structural policies and the scope of conditionality, 185
5.4 The Issue of Moral Hazard: Controversies Over Crisis Lending	194
5.5 What Worked Best? Impressions from Korea's Recovery	197
5.6 Concluding Perspectives	201
6 Perspectives on Economic Growth and Poverty Reduction	207
6.1 Proximate Determinants of Growth: Physical Capital, Human Capital, and Technology	210
6.2 Deeper Determinants of Growth	212
6.2.1 Institutions and incentives, 214 • 6.2.2 Openness to international trade, 220 • 6.2.3 Openness to international capital flows, 223
6.3 Poverty	226
6.4 Aid and Debt Relief	230
6.5 Concluding Perspectives	236
PART THREE. THE AGENDA FOR REFORM
7 What Can Individual Countries Do?	243
7.1 Devise a Sensible Strategy for Liberalizing Domestic Financial Markets and International Capital Flows	245
7.2 Strengthen Institutions, Information, and the Financial and Corporate Sectors	257
7.3 Adopt Sustainable Exchange Rate Arrangements	260
7.4 Maintain Debt Discipline, Sound Macroeconomic Policies, and Market Confidence	268
7.5 Open the Economy to Trade and FDI in a Manner That Results in Growth-Enhancing Activities	273
7.6 Concluding Perspectives	277
8 How Can the International Financial System Be Reformed?	283
8.1 Strengthen the Quality and Impact of IMF Surveillance	283
8.2 Induce Changes in the Composition of International Capital Flows	291
8.3 Introduce Contingent Debt Contracts or Other Mechanisms for Hedging Against Macroeconomic Risks	298

viii	Contents
8.4	Address Informational Imperfections and Distorted Incentives on the Supply Side of International Capital Flows 301
8.5	Revamp Debt Resolution Procedures 304
8.6	Strengthen the Frameworks for Development Aid and Official Nonconcessional Lending 314
8.7	Concluding Perspectives 318
References 327
Author Index 359
Subject Index 365	