Acknowledgments

These essays were written over a period of nearly 10 years, during which I benefited from many kinds of help, advice and criticism from more people than I can list. Some of these debts were acknowledged when particular essays were first published. Thanks are due to librarians, especially the law librarians, at University College London, Boston College, Boston University, the University of Miami Law School, and the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford. The author and publishers thank the following for their permission to reproduce copyright material: Ashgate publishers, Harcourt Brace, Oxford University Press, Routledge, SLS Legal Publications (Northern Ireland), and the editors of the Brooklyn Law Review, the Maastricht Journal for Europe and Comparative Law, and Tidsskrift for Rettsvitensdkap. Some material in chapter 3 was reproduced from 48 University of Miami Law Review 119 (1993) which holds copyright in the original article.

I am particularly grateful to students in seminars in Boston, Miami and London where many of my ideas were first tested out. Also to colleagues in Faculty seminars in Berkeley, Boston, Capetown, Cardozo Law School, Hong Kong, London, Maastricht, Miami, Tilburg and Warwick for many helpful suggestions and questions. I owe a general debt to Terry Anderson, Susan Haack, Michael Likovsky and Joseph Perkovitch. My wife, as ever, provided constant support, encouragement, and practical help.

This book was completed while I was a Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford. I am especially grateful for the marvellous support provided by the Center and its staff.
