

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

One of the most important plays of the twentieth century, A Streetcar Named Desire revolutionized the modern stage. This book offers the first continuous history of the play in production from 1947 to 1998 with an emphasis on the collaborative achievement of Tennessee Williams, Elia Kazan, and Jo Mielziner in the Broadway premiere. From there chapters survey major national premieres by the world's leading directors including those by Seki Sano (Mexico), Luchino Visconti (Italy), Ingmar Bergman (Sweden), Jean Cocteau (France), and Laurence Olivier (England). Philip Kolin also evaluates key English-language revivals and assesses how the script evolved and adapted to cultural changes. Interpretations by black and gay theatre companies also receive analyses, and transformations into other media, such as ballet, film, television, and opera (premiered in 1998), form an important part of the overall study.

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

WILLIAMS

A Streetcar Named Desire

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

PLAYS IN PRODUCTION

Series editor: Michael Robinson

PUBLISHED VOLUMES

Ibsen: A Doll's House by Egil Törnqvist

Miller: Death of a Salesman by Brenda Murphy

Molière: Don Juan by David Whitton

Wilde: Salome by William Tydeman and Steven Price

Brecht: Mother Courage and Her Children by Peter Thomson

Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire by Philip C. Kolin

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

WILLIAMS
A Streetcar Named Desire

*

PHILIP C. KOLIN
University of Southern Mississippi

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press
 0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire
 Philip C. Kolin
 Frontmatter
More information

PUBLISHED BY THE PRESS SYNDICATE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE
 The Pitt Building, Trumpington Street, Cambridge, United Kingdom

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
 The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 2RU, UK www.cup.cam.ac.uk
 40 West 20th Street, New York, NY 10011-4211, USA www.cup.org
 10 Stamford Road, Oakleigh, Melbourne 3166, Australia
 Ruiz de Alarcón 13, 28014 Madrid, Spain

© Cambridge University Press 2000

This book is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2000

Typeface Adobe Garamond 10.75/14 System QuarkXPress™ [SE]

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloguing in Publication data

Kolin, Philip C.

Williams: A streetcar named desire / Philip C. Kolin.

p. cm. – (Plays in production)

Includes bibliographical references (p.) and index.

ISBN 0 521 62344 8 (hardback) – ISBN 0 521 62610 2 (paperback)

1. Williams, Tennessee, 1911–1983. Streetcar named desire.

2. Williams, Tennessee, 1911–1983 – Dramatic production.

3. Williams, Tennessee, 1911–1983 – Stage history. 4. New Orleans

(La.) – In literature. I. Title. II. Series.

PS3545.I5365S824 2000

812'.54–dc21 99–15825 CIP

ISBN 0 521 62344 8 hardback

ISBN 0 521 62610 2 paperback

Transferred to digital printing 2004

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

To Margie and Al Parish
with love and prayers
ora et labora

Cambridge University Press
 0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire
 Philip C. Kolin
 Frontmatter
More information

CONTENTS

List of illustrations	x
General preface	xiii
Preface	xv
Acknowledgments	xviii
1 A Streetcar Named Desire – the Broadway premiere and beyond	1
2 Streetcar on the world stage: the national premieres, 1948–1953	40
3 Streetcar revivals on the English-language stage	83
4 Recasting the players: expanding and radicalizing the Streetcar script	120
5 Streetcar in other media	149
Select production chronology	175
Notes	184
Select bibliography	209
Index	215

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

ILLUSTRATIONS

- 1 Full stage of Broadway premiere of Streetcar (New York, page 13 1947) (photo credit Eileen Darby)
- 2 Uta Hagen (Blanche) and Anthony Quinn (Stanley) in the road company production of Streetcar (1949) (photo credit Eileen Darby) 37
- 3 María Douglas (Blanche) and Wolf Ruvinskis (Stanley) in the Mexico City premiere of Streetcar (1948) (photo credit
Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas at Austin) 46
- 4 Vivien Leigh (Blanche) and Bonar Colleano (Stanley) in the London premiere of Streetcar (1949) (photo credit Corbis Collection; reproduced with permission of Globus) 64
- 5 Arletty (Blanche) and Yves Vincent (Stanley) in the French adaptation of Streetcar by Jean Cocteau, Paris (1949) (photo credit Collection of Richard Freeman Leavitt) 74
- 6 Scene from Streetcar in the 1956 New York revival starring
Tallulah Bankhead (Blanche) and Gerald O’Laughlin
(Stanley) (photo credit Collection of Richard Freeman Leavitt) 86
- 7 Scene from 1974 German production of Streetcar with a black Stanley (Günther Kaufmann) and white Blanche (Ute
Uellner), directed by Charles Lang (photo credit Stiftung
Stadtmuseum, Berlin) 131
- 8 Cast of Belle Reprieve (1991), a queer/camp adaptation of Streetcar with Bette Bourne (Blanche), Precious Pearl
(Mitch), Peggy Shaw (Stanley), and Lois Weaver (Stella)
(photo credit Peggy Shaw by permission of Sheila Burnett) 143

Cambridge University Press
0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire
Philip C. Kolin
Frontmatter
More information

Illustrations · xi

- | | | |
|----|--|-----|
| 9 | Scene from the Warner Bros. film version of Streetcar (1951) with Vivien Leigh as Blanche and Marlon Brando as Stanley (photo credit Corbis Collection; reproduced with permission of Globus) | 150 |
| 10 | Teleplay of Streetcar (ABC Television, 1984) with Treat Williams (Stanley) and Ann-Margret (Blanche) (photo credit Sygma Photo News) | 161 |
| 11 | Scene from the San Francisco Opera's Streetcar (San Francisco, September 1998) score by André Previn and starring Renee Fleming as Blanche and Rodney Gilfry as Stanley (photo credit Marty Sohl and the San Francisco Opera) | 169 |

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

GENERAL PREFACE

Volumes in the series Plays in Production take major dramatic texts and examine their transposition, firstly on to the stage and, secondly, where appropriate, into other media. Each book includes concise but informed studies of individual dramatic texts, focusing on the original theatrical and historical context of a play in relation to its initial performance and reception followed by subsequent major interpretations on stage, both under the impact of changing social, political and cultural values, and in response to developments in the theatre generally.

Many of the plays also have been transposed into other media – film, opera, television, ballet – which may well be the form in which they are first encountered by a contemporary audience. Thus, a substantial study of the play-text and the issues it raises for theatrical realization is supplemented by an assessment of such adaptations as well as the production history, where the emphasis is on the development of a performance tradition for each work, including staging and acting styles, rather than simply the archaeological reconstruction of past performances.

Plays included in the series are all likely to receive regular performance and individual volumes will be of interest to the informed reader as well as to students of theatre history and literature. Each book also contains an annotated production chronology as well as numerous photographs from key performances.

Michael Robinson
University of East Anglia

Cambridge University Press
0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire
Philip C. Kolin
Frontmatter
More information

PREFACE

A Streetcar Named Desire is one of the most influential plays of the twentieth century. In this volume I have attempted to provide a history of major productions of Williams's play on the world stage since 1947 as well as to offer an assessment of how the play has been translated or adapted for ballet, film, teleplay, and opera. Consistent with the goals of the Plays in Performance Series, I have emphasized the ways in which the script has been validated and transformed through production and how audiences have responded to the changing performance styles through which Streetcar has been represented.

This book begins appropriately with, and places greatest emphasis on, the Broadway premiere of 1947 which catapulted Williams to international fame. The premiere saw one of the most powerful and collaborative teams in theatre – director-mentor Elia Kazan, producer Irene Selznick, designer Jo Mielziner, costumer Lucinda Ballard, composer Alex North, and a cast of young actors shaped Williams's script to create a production that directors and actors for decades esteemed as the standard by which Streetcars should be enacted. This opening chapter relies heavily on Kazan's Streetcar Notebook, William's letters, Jo Mielziner's sketches, and stage manager notes to reflect accurately what audiences saw on stage. Additionally, actors' memoirs and biographies contribute significantly to our understanding of how Williams's characters talked, moved, dressed, and related to props. One of my aims in this chapter was to show Streetcar's indebtedness to the dynamics of collaboration. Moreover, as this beginning and later chapters show, Streetcar established the careers of many actors who played in it. The young cast of

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

xvi · Preface

Streetcar in 1947 – as well as those actors who starred in the road company productions in 1948–49 – revealed that there was magic in the web of Williams’s script.

Chapter 2 focuses on six selective, but in many ways representative, national premieres of Streetcar from Mexico City to Tokyo (1948–53). Historically, many of the world’s most prominent directors and scenographers reinforced Streetcar’s acclaim as a masterpiece of world theatre while they simultaneously reinterpreted the scenography, props, music, and characterization for their particular culture and audience. This chapter explores the performance work of Seki Sano (who directed one of the first premieres outside the US) in Mexico City; Luchino Visconti and Franco Zeffirelli (the designer) in Rome; Ingmar Bergman (who read the script through a cinematic prism) in Sweden; Jean Cocteau, whose sensual adaptation in Paris, 1949 proleptically foregrounded the dark desire that became the focus of later productions; Sir Laurence Olivier, who shortened the script in London; and the Bungakuza Dramatic Company, whose Tokyo premiere helped to westernize Japanese theatre. Seen as an icon of American culture, Streetcar quickly acquired an international ethos.

In Chapter 3, the revivals of Streetcar (1956–98) on the English-speaking stage illustrate how later decades and tastes renegotiated the performance of the script and how that script consequently evolved through such productions. One major change involved the ways in which Williams’s characters were transformed from the social models Kazan envisioned and enshrined in the 1940s: Blanche became far less willowy and more assertive in the 1980s and 1990s and Stanley was more sly, subtle, not nearly as much in control. In revivals, Mielziner’s expressionistic scrims were exchanged for much more realistic and provocative sets, including the experience of Streetcar in theatres in the round.

Chapter 4 documents alternative Streetcars by concentrating on productions by black and gay theatre companies. These non-Eurocentric and cross-gendered productions destabilized the tradi-

Cambridge University Press

0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire

Philip C. Kolin

Frontmatter

More information

Preface · xvii

tional ideologies upon which the Broadway and many national premieres were based. They radicalized and enlarged Williams's script by freeing it from expectations based upon conventional valorizations of ethnicity, race, and gender. Viewed in light of a long, neglected history of black productions, Streetcar in performance encodes racial and social messages impossible in all-white productions. The black synesthesia of Streetcar reifies the power of transformable characterization and the representation of a different set of cultural anxieties signified in word and action. Black Streetcars also successfully challenged the (false) claims of a seminal Blanche being white in language, gesture, or costume. The last third of the chapter examines Belle Reprise, the queer/camp adaptation of Streetcar that realigned the gender roles of woman and man both in the traditional script and in the famous 1951 Warner Brothers film.

In the last chapter, I turn to Streetcar in other media, with emphasis falling upon the process through which the script has been expanded, cut, literalized, choreographed and contemporized. As director of the 1951 film, Kazan had to struggle against the imposition of censorship on the script that he did not face on stage, and he invented a cinematic code to represent the psychological effects that stage productions presented more directly. The 1984 Streetcar teleplay directed by John Erman intensified the violence and eroticism in the script, making them far more explicit than Kazan or any stage production (from 1947 to 1983) ever could. Various ballet versions of Williams's play also receive meritorious attention as visual representations of jazz and fury inherent in the script. The last section of this chapter offers one of the first assessments of the transformation of Streetcar into opera – André Previn's score for the San Francisco Opera – and stresses the ways in which Previn challenged Kazan's valorization of Stanley over Blanche. Previn's opera had to adopt a new performance language to accommodate a Streetcar in song. The inevitable conclusion of this chapter, and the book as a whole, is that Streetcar succeeds precisely because performance verifies its non-static, protean power.

Cambridge University Press
 0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire
 Philip C. Kolin
 Frontmatter
More information

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book has evolved over the years as I pursued the routes A Streetcar Named Desire took on the world's stages. Along the way I have happily acquired many debts and been the beneficiary of the kindness of many strangers and friends alike. I want to thank the following individuals for reading earlier drafts of some of these chapters and giving me the wisdom of their criticism: Thomas P. Adler (Purdue University); Allean Hale (University of Illinois); Brian Parker (University of Toronto); Don B. Wilmeth (Brown University); and Jürgen Wolter (Universität Wuppertal). I am also very grateful to Michael Robinson, the Plays in Performance Series editor, and Victoria Cooper at Cambridge University Press for their sage counsel and encouragement throughout this project.

I express a special debt to Cathy Henderson and the staff of the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin, where I spent two sabbaticals working on Streetcar materials and where I received their gracious help and knowledgeable assistance about Williams's theatre documents. I am also grateful to the many theatre companies, libraries, and photographers who supplied me with the essential documents that are the foundation of this book.

Sections of Chapters 2 and 4 have appeared in part of my articles in the following publications:

“‘Affectionate and mighty regards from Vivien and me’: Sir Laurence Olivier on the London Premiere of A Streetcar Named Desire,” Missouri Review 13.3 (1991): 143–57.

“‘From Coitus to Craziiness’: The Italian Premiere of A Streetcar Named Desire,” Journal of American Drama and Theatre 10 (Spring 1998): 74–92.

Cambridge University Press
0521623448 - Williams: A Streetcar Named Desire
Philip C. Kolin
Frontmatter
More information

Acknowledgements · xix

- “The Japanese Premiere of A Streetcar Named Desire,” Mississippi Quarterly 48 (Fall 1995): 713–34.
- “On a Trolley to the Cinema: Ingmar Bergman and the First Swedish Production of A Streetcar Named Desire,” South Carolina Review 27, nos. 1 and 2 (Fall 1994/Spring 1995): 97–128.
- “Williams in Ebony: Black and Multi-Cultural Productions of Williams’s A Streetcar Named Desire,” Black American Literature Forum 25 (Spring 1991): 147–81.

I owe a special and continuing debt to the University of Southern Mississippi for supporting my work; in particular I gratefully acknowledge the assistance of President Horace Fleming; Associate Provost James Hollandsworth; Vice President Donald Cotten; Dean of the College of Liberal Arts Glenn T. Harper; and Chair of the English Department Michael N. Salda. My research assistant Terri Ruckel deserves a special place in my heart for all her work in helping me prepare this manuscript.

Finally, I thank my family, Eric Kolin, Theresa Kolin, Evan Kolin and Kristin Kolin, and my extended family for their love and prayers: Margie and Al Parish, Colby Kullman, Frs. Michael Tracey and G. Edward Lundin, Sisters Carmelita Stinn and Annette Seymour, Deacon Ralph Torelli, Cathy and Hilary Englert, Mary Lux, John and Sandy Krumpus, Susan Arrington, Dia Stapleton, Rob and Sally Eddy, and all my St. Thomas Prayer Group partners. My gratitude also goes to Janice Fisk. Finally, I thank God for the grace to complete this book on time.

P. C. K.