Rational Commitment and Social Justice

Essays for Gregory Kavka

Gregory S. Kavka (1947–1994) was a prominent and influential figure in contemporary moral and political philosophy. The new essays in this volume are concerned with fundamental issues of rational commitment and social justice to which Kavka devoted his work as a philosopher. The essays take Kavka's work as a point of departure and seek to advance the respective debates. The topics include the relationship between intention and moral action (as part of which Kavka's famous "toxin puzzle" is a focus of discussion), the nature of deterrence, the rationality of morals, contractarian ethics, and the contemporary relevance of Hobbes' political thought.

Incorporating important new philosophical statements of problems and fresh contributions to the ongoing debate about rational intention, this volume will interest not only philosophers but also political scientists and economists.

Acknowledgments

We are grateful to our editor at Cambridge University Press, Terence Moore, for his support in making this collection of essays commemorating our colleague and friend Gregory Kavka possible and to several anonymous referees for the Press for useful comments and suggestions. We also wish to thank our contributors for their advice, especially the late Jean Hampton, who was particularly helpful, and our thanks to Gary Watson for bringing us together for a conference held in Greg's honor ("Rationality, Commitment, and Community") at the University of California at Irvine, February 10–12, 1995, where seven of the essays published here were first presented.
