

Cambridge University Press

0521640539 - Politics After Television: Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

Arvind Rajagopal

Frontmatter

More information

POLITICS AFTER TELEVISION

Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

In January 1987, the Indian state-run television began broadcasting a Hindu epic in serial form, the Ramayan, to nationwide audiences, violating a decades-old taboo on religious partisanship. What resulted was the largest political campaign in post-independence times, around the symbol of Lord Ram, led by Hindu nationalists. The complexion of Indian politics was irrevocably changed thereafter. This book examines this extraordinary series of events. While audiences may have thought they were harking back to an epic golden age, Hindu nationalist leaders were embracing the prospects of neoliberalism and globalization. Television was the device that hinged these movements together, symbolizing the new possibilities of politics, at once more inclusive and authoritarian. Simultaneously, this study examines how the larger historical context was woven into and changed the character of Hindu nationalism.

ARVIND RAJAGOPAL is Associate Professor in the Department of Culture and Communication, New York University. He was a Member of the School of Social Sciences, at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, in 1998–99.

Cambridge University Press

0521640539 - Politics After Television: Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

Arvind Rajagopal

Frontmatter

More information

POLITICS AFTER TELEVISION

Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

ARVIND RAJAGOPAL

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press

0521640539 - Politics After Television: Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

Arvind Rajagopal

Frontmatter

More information

PUBLISHED BY THE PRESS SYNDICATE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE
The Pitt Building, Trumpington Street, Cambridge, United Kingdom

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 2RU, UK www.cup.cam.ac.uk
40 West 20th Street, New York, NY 10011-4211, USA www.cup.org
10 Stamford Road, Oakleigh, Melbourne 3166, Australia
Ruiz de Alarcón 13, 28014 Madrid, Spain

© Arvind Rajagopal 2001

This book is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2001

Printed in the United Kingdom at the University Press, Cambridge

Typeset in Baskerville 11/12.5pt [VN]

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British LibraryLibrary of Congress Cataloguing in Publication data

Rajagopal, Arvind
Politics after television: religious nationalism and the reshaping of the Indian public
by Arvind Rajagopal
p. cm.

ISBN 0 521 64053 9 (hardback) 0 521 64839 4 (paperback)
1. Television in politics – India. 2. Elections – India. 3. Mass media – Political aspects –
India. 4. Nationalism – Religious aspects – India. 5. Immigrants – United States – Hindu influence. I. Title.

HE8700.76.L4 R34 2001
306.2'0954 – dc21 00–028954

ISBN 0 521 64053 9 hardback
ISBN 0 521 64839 4 paperback

Cambridge University Press

0521640539 - Politics After Television: Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

Arvind Rajagopal

Frontmatter

More informationContents

Acknowledgments	page vii
Introduction	1
Television's power: theoretical premises	3
The Ram Temple movement, the BJP, and a fissured public	12
Varieties of nationalism	20
Overview	24
1 Hindu nationalism and the cultural forms of Indian politics	30
In the throes of economic crisis: liberalization/"Hinduization"	35
Passive revolution and the unraveling of a fragile consensus	43
The Hindu nationalist combine	51
The non-committed voter and the retailing of Hindu identity	63
2 Prime time religion	72
State sponsorship in the commerce of images	75
Situating contemporary uses of an epic tradition	86
Televising a lost utopia: ancient science, benign oppression, and a proto-modern state	99
Old symbols in a new language of politics	117
3 The communicating thing and its public	121
Television and the restructuring of popular and domestic space	123
Television and the transformation of the context of politics	135
Narratives of community: the effects of going public	147
4 A "split public" in the making and unmaking of the Ram Janmabhumi movement	151
The Indian press: government, language, and politics	156
A hall of mirrors: the BJP's print media strategy	171
The Ram Janmabhumi campaign as a managed event	187
Language-divided print media as a strategic resource	208

Cambridge University Press

0521640539 - Politics After Television: Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

Arvind Rajagopal

Frontmatter

More information

vi

Contents

5	Organization, performance, and symbol	212
	Performing the movement	216
	Yoking symbols and propaganda	224
6	Hindutva goes global	237
	The figure of the “NRI”	239
	Syndicated Hinduism: crafting identity across diversity	244
	Self-making and immigrant cultures in the U.S.	254
	Expatriate nostalgia and Hindu nationalism	263
	Conclusion	271
	How has television changed the context of politics in India?	277
	Appendix: Background to the Babri Masjid dispute	284
	Notes	292
	Select bibliography	372
	Index	390

Cambridge University Press

0521640539 - Politics After Television: Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

Arvind Rajagopal

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgments

Todd Gitlin, Robert Bellah, and Robert Goldman have been critical for their mentorship and counsel. Linda Hess planted the seed that grew into this book. To Arjun Appadurai, Nicholas Dirks, and Susanne Rudolph I express my thanks for their critical encouragement. My thanks to Janaki Bakhle, Tanya Fernando, John Foran, Akhil Gupta, Daniel Hallin, B. Kailasam, Aisha Karim, Riyad Koya, Philip Lutgendorf, Purnima Mankekar, Manjunath Pendakur, Steven Pierce, Philip Schlesinger, Anand Swamy, and Jyotika Viridi, who have generously helped in various ways during different stages of this work. I owe Rajeswari Sunder Rajan more than most, for her inspiration and support. Carin McCormack's eye for the architecture of an argument has left its mark on this book.

I am extremely grateful to K. Narayanan for his encouragement and help. Venkitesh Ramakrishnan offered valuable information, and much assistance in meeting people in Uttar Pradesh (U.P.), as did Radhika Ramaseshan. Geeta Bakshi was enormously encouraging in my attempts to gain insight into the workings of Doordarshan. Amar Kanwar, Rahul Roy, and Saba Dewan, as well as Sabina Gadihoke and Sabina Kidwai and the other members of the Media Storm collective, graciously allowed me to view film footage. Thanks to Amar Singh Sachan, Anupama Chandra, Jyoti Mudgal, Kewal Kapoor, Natasha, Niti Anand, Sanjay Kumar, Shahana Bhattacharya, and Usha Bharadwaj for their help with transcription and translation. S. Ravindran helped with the interviewing process in U.P. My appreciation again to Sanjay Kumar for his companionship and quiet encouragement while I was writing. Cara Landry has given me more than I can easily acknowledge. E. Deenadayalan and Nirmala Karunan provided a home away from home when I needed it most, as did Ravi and Srilakshmi Rajagopal, Priya and Asha Jain, and Radha Kumar, and M. K. Srinivasan. Dr. D. L. Prasanna Rao and Manjula Rao dealt cheerfully with the

Cambridge University Press

0521640539 - Politics After Television: Religious Nationalism and the Reshaping of the Indian Public

Arvind Rajagopal

Frontmatter

More information

viii

Acknowledgments

conversion of their basement into an utterly chaotic workspace during the closing stages of this project. For that and much more I am grateful. My gratitude to the scores of people who allowed my repeated intrusions into their lives, and unselfishly gave of their time and friendship.

Robert P. Goldman granted me the opportunity to give a senior seminar at Berkeley, where some of the early ideas in this project were first formulated. For the title of the seminar, which appears here as the title of chapter two, I thank Satish Deshpande. I am indebted to Thomas Adler, William Shafer, Charles Stewart, and most of all to Cynthia Stohl for their help in securing leave while I was engaged in writing this book; to my colleagues who bore the brunt of the teaching in my absence, I owe a further debt of gratitude.

Portions of this book were presented, in earlier versions, at Aalochana, Pune, the 1995 American Ethnological Society meetings in Austin, Texas, the 1995 American Sociological Association meetings in Washington, DC, the University of Chicago, Cornell University, the University of Hyderabad, the University of Iowa, the Nehru Memorial Museum and Library in New Delhi, and the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

My gratitude to my parents for their never-failing affection and support.

And, finally, this book is for Anupama Rao, who has sustained me in numerous ways throughout this project, with inspiration, fierce criticism, and unending challenges. She has been just the reader I could have hoped for, imaginative, generous, quick, and insightful, and more than the friend I ever deserved. Without her nurturance, the writing of this book would have been far more difficult and painful, and indeed it might not have occurred at all.

This book has developed over the course of several years, and some of my earlier essays foreshadowed some of the arguments in it. Portions of this book appeared in earlier versions in “Ram Janmabhumi, Consumer Identity and Image-based Politics,” Economic and Political Weekly, vol. 29, no. 27, 1994, pp. 1659–1668, and “Communalism and the Consuming Subject,” in the Economic and Political Weekly, vol. 31, no. 6, 1996, pp. 341–348 (chapter one); “Mediating Modernity: Theorizing Reception in a Non-Western Society,” Communication Review, vol. 1, no. 4, 1996, pp. 441–469 (chapter two); “Communities Imagined and Unimagined: Contemporary Indian Variations on the Public Sphere,” Discourse, vol. 21, no. 2, 1998, pp. 48–84 (chapter three); and in “Hindu Immigrants in the U.S.: Imagining Different Communities?” Bulletin of Concerned Asian Scholars (Oakland, Calif.), 1997, pp. 51–65 (chapter six).