

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More information

COLONIAL WRITING
AND THE NEW WORLD
1583–1671

Until recently most scholars of Anglo-American colonial history have treated colonialism either as an exclusively American phenomenon or, conversely, as a European one. Colonial Writing and the New World 1583–1671 argues for a reading of the colonial period that attempts to render an account of both the European origins of colonial expansion and its specifically American consequences. The author offers an account of the simultaneous emergence of colonialism and nationalism during the early modern period, and of the role that English interactions with native populations played in attempts to articulate a coherent English identity. He draws on a wide variety of texts ranging from travel narratives and accounts of the colony in Virginia to sermons, conversion tracts and writings about the Algonquin language.

THOMAS SCANLAN has taught at the University of Virginia and Ohio University where he is now Assistant Professor of English. He has published articles and reviews in American Literature and Spenser Studies.

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More information

COLONIAL WRITING
AND THE NEW WORLD

1583–1671

Allegories of Desire

THOMAS SCANLAN

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More information

PUBLISHED BY THE PRESS SYNDICATE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE
The Pitt Building, Trumpington Street, Cambridge, United Kingdom

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 2RU. UK <http://www.cup.cam.ac.uk>
40 West 20th Street, New York, NY 10011-4211, USA <http://www.cup.org>
10 Stamford Road, Oakleigh, Melbourne 3166, Australia

©Thomas Scanlan 1999

This book is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 1999

Typeset in Baskerville 11/12.5 [wv]

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress cataloguing in publication data

Scanlan, Thomas.

Colonial writing and the New World. 1583–1671: allegories of desire/Thomas Scanlan.

p. cm.

Includes index.

ISBN 0 521 64305-8 (hardback)

1. American prose literature – Colonial period, ca. 1600–1775 – History and criticism. 2. English prose literature – Early modern, 1500–1700 – History and criticism. 3. United States – History – Colonial period, ca. 1600–1775 – Historiography. 4. Indians of North America – First contact with Europeans. 5. Great Britain – Colonies – America – Historiography. 6. Colonies in literature. 7. America – In literature. 8. Desire in literature. 9. Allegory. I. Title.

PS367.S33 1999

818'.10809-dc21 98-30999 CIP

ISBN 0 521 64305 8 hardback

Transferred to digital printing 2002

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More information

For Laurie with love

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More informationContents

List of illustrations	page viii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
1. The allegorical structure of colonial desire	8
2. Fear and love: two versions of Protestant ambivalence	38
3. Forgoing the nation: the Irish problem	68
4. Preaching the nation: the sermon as promotion	93
5. Love and shame: Roger Williams and A Key into the Language of America	123
6. Fear and self-loathing: John Eliot's Indian Dialogues	155
Coda	187
Notes	191
Index	240

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More informationIllustrationsBetween pages 58 and 59

1. “A weroan or great Lorde of Virginia” from Thomas Harriot, A briefe and true report of the New Found Land of Virginia, Frankfurt, 1590.
2. “On the cheiff Ladyes of Secota” from Harriot, A briefe and true report of the New Found Land of Virginia.
3. “A yonge and gentill woeman doughter of Secota” from Harriot, A briefe and true report of the New Found Land of Virginia.
4. “Their seetheynge of their meete in earthen pottes” from Harriot, A briefe and true report of the New Found Land of Virginia.
5. “Their sitting at meate” from Harriot, A briefe and true report of the New Found Land of Virginia.
6. “The true picture of one picte” from Harriot, A briefe and true report of the New Found Land of Virginia.
7. “The true picture of a women picte” from Harriot, A briefe and true report of the New Found Land of Virginia.
8. Frontispiece from Theodor DeBry, Americae Tertia Pars, Frankfurt, 1592.
9. From Hans Staden, Historiae Brasilianae, liber primus, ch. 40, in DeBry, Americae Tertia Pars.
10. From Hans Staden, Historiae Brasilianae, liber secundus, ch. 29, in DeBry, Americae Tertia Pars.
11. From Jean de Léry, Historia Navigationis in Brasiliam Americae Provinciam, ch. 9, in DeBry, Americae Tertia Pars.

All illustrations are reproduced by permission of the Tracy W. McGregor Library, Special Collections Department, University of Virginia.

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More information

Acknowledgments

I would like to acknowledge here the tremendous debt I owe to my family, friends, students, and colleagues. I cannot possibly mention by name all of the people who have helped me to see this project through from its earliest stages to its current incarnation, but suffice it to say that this book would never have been written without the support of the various communities to which I have been fortunate enough to belong. I would therefore like to thank the faculty and students of the Graduate Program in Literature at Duke University, colleagues at the University of Virginia, and the staffs of the John Carter Brown Library and the University of Virginia Library's department of Special Collections.

I owe my next largest debt to the various friends and colleagues who have offered criticism and support during the past several years. Tan Lin was one of the first people to figure out what this book was really about, and I am grateful that he was kind enough to share that with me. Jonathan Flatley is the kind of friend and colleague without whom books could not be written: he read large chunks of unwieldy prose on short notice and always managed to make the ideas clearer and the argument stronger. Steve Arata read the whole book and offered invaluable suggestions and comments. Steve Cushman read the whole book twice and offered the kind of criticism and support that helped me to keep believing in the project. Peter and Kris Onuf have taught me many things by example: how to write, how to make beautiful things, how to enjoy life. Many other people helped to make this book better, and I would like to thank them for everything they added: Uschi Appelt, Larry Buell, Michelle Burnham, Eric Lott, V. Y. Mudimbe, Dana Nelson, Teju Olaniyan, Sally Poor, Yael Schlick, Terry Toulouse, Cindy Wall, Mary Catherine Wimer, and Peter Wood.

As a graduate student I benefited immeasurably from the criti-

Cambridge University Press

0521643058 - Colonial Writing and the New World, 1583-1671: Allegories of Desire

Thomas Scanlan

Frontmatter

More information

x

Acknowledgements

cism and support of my mentors. Cathy Davidson possesses the rare gift of being able to deliver criticism with just the right amount of enthusiasm. Stanley Fish has been unwavering in his support of the project and unsparing with his time. Annabel Patterson, in some very real sense, taught me how to do scholarly work, as well as how to love it.

I owe a great debt to all of the people associated with Cambridge University Press, who helped to bring this book into print. I cannot imagine a better editor than Josie Dixon, who supported the project from the outset and provided much needed guidance as I prepared the manuscript for publication. Mary Fuller and Peter Hulme, who read the manuscript for the press, functioned as ideal readers, offering the kinds of critical comments and helpful suggestions that a writer might hope for but never expect. And Rachel Coldicutt was as cheerful as she was efficient in copy-editing a less than perfect typescript.

Only my parents, Joe and Robin Scanlan, know how much I owe them, and so I will not try to thank them for everything here. My brothers and sisters – Margaret, Vincent, Michael, Brian, Kate, and Daniel – have contributed more to this book than they know. And finally, from my son Quinn who was born during the writing of this book, I have learned more (about living and writing) than I can possibly say in a sentence or two. He has my undying gratitude and admiration.

I have saved the greatest debt for last. I owe so much more to Laurie Fox than these few words. Not only have her critical rigor and flawless sense of style made each sentence better, but more importantly her love and friendship have made the most trying moments of the writing of this book infinitely more bearable. Without her good humor and endless patience I could never have finished the book. It is dedicated to her with love.