

Contents

Preface	page vii
Prologue	I
The argument	3
Approaches and methods	6
Ancient and modern	14
1 Deception and the rhetoric of Athenian identity	20
Honest hoplites and tricky Spartans	23
Arguments from (national) character: Demosthenes' Against Leptines	40
Symbolic sanctions: the law and the curse against deceiving the demos	51
Staging Spartans and stratēgoi : Euripides' Andromache	64
2 Deceiving the enemy: negotiation and anxiety	85
Vidal-Naquet, the ephēbeia and military trickery	86
Tricky Codrus: son of the 'Black Hunter'	89
Military trickery as a negotiable term	102
Deceit, fear and hoplite courage	107
Working with children and animals: teaching deceit in Xenophon's Cyropaedia	122
3 Athens and the 'noble lie'	143
Detienne and the 'masters of truth'	145
Plato's pharmacy: the 'noble lie' in the Republic	151
The 'noble lie' in democratic oratory	163
Fiction problematised: religion as 'noble lie' in the Sisyphus	179
War's first casualty: deception in Sophocles' Philoctetes	188
4 The rhetoric of anti-rhetoric: Athenian oratory	202
Spin and anti-spin: rhetoric as the technology of lies	204
Sophistry and logography, witchcraft and 'cleverness' in Athenian oratory	209
Speaking democratically and the response of Plato and Aristotle	215
The physiognomics of deception: Demosthenes' Against Stephanus I	219
The lying topos: the orators deconstruct the commonplace	227
Deceptive mimēsis : 'lie detection' in Aeschines and Demosthenes	231

vi	Contents
5	Thinking with the rhetoric of anti-rhetoric	242
	Primary Colors : metafiction and metarhetoric	242
	Who can you trust? Thucydides' Mytilenean debate and Aristophanes' Knights	248
	'Trust me, I'm a comedian!' Aristophanes' Acharnians	258
	'Men should have two voices': Euripides' tragedy of (anti-)rhetoric	274
	Postscript: the deceptive demos	289
	Epilogue	292
	Bibliography	299
	Index locorum	321
	General index	330