

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly

Frontmatter

More information

The British conquered India within two generations, not only because of their military superiority, but also because they deployed a sophisticated intelligence system. In a penetrating account of the evolution of British intelligence gathering in India between the wars of annexation in 1793–1818 and the aftermath of the Mutiny-Rebellion of 1857, C.A. Bayly shows how networks of Indian running-spies and political secretaries were recruited by the British to secure military, political and social information about their subjects. He also examines the social and intellectual origins of these ‘native informants’, and considers how the colonial authorities interpreted and often misinterpreted the information they supplied. As Professor Bayly demonstrates, it was their misunderstanding of the subtleties of Indian politics and values which ultimately contributed to the failure of the British to anticipate the rebellions and mutinies of 1857. He argues, however, that even before this India’s complex systems of debate and communication were challenging the political and intellectual dominance of the European rulers.

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
Frontmatter

More information

Cambridge Studies in Indian History and Society

Empire and information

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
Frontmatter

More information

Cambridge Studies in Indian History and Society 1

Editorial board

C.A. BAYLY

Vere Harmsworth Professor of Imperial and Naval History, University of Cambridge, and Fellow of St Catharine's College

RAJNAVAYAN CHANDAVARKAR

Fellow of Trinity College, and Lecturer in History, University of Cambridge

GORDON JOHNSON

President of Wolfson College, and Director, Centre of South Asian Studies, University of Cambridge

Cambridge Studies in Indian History and Society will publish monographs on the history and anthropology of modern India. In addition to its primary scholarly focus, the series will also include work of an interdisciplinary nature which will contribute to contemporary social and cultural debates about Indian history and society. In this way, the series will further the general development of historical and anthropological knowledge and attract a wider readership than that concerned with India alone.

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
Frontmatter

More information

Empire and information

*Intelligence gathering and social communication
in India, 1780–1870*

C.A. Bayly

University of Cambridge

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
Frontmatter

More information

Published by the Press Syndicate of the University of Cambridge
The Pitt Building, Trumpington Street, Cambridge CB2 1RP
40 West 20th Street, New York, NY 10011-4211, USA
10 Stamford Road, Oakleigh, Melbourne 3166, Australia

© Cambridge University Press 1996

First published 1996
First paperback edition 1999

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress cataloguing in publication data

Bayly, C.A. (Christopher Alan)

Empire and information: intelligence gathering and social communication
in India, 1780-1870 / C.A. Bayly

p. cm. – (Cambridge studies in Indian history and society: 1)

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0 521 57085 9 (hardcover)

1. Intelligence service – India – History.
2. Communication – Social aspects – India – History.
3. India – Politics and government – 1765-1947.

I. Title. II. Series.

JQ229.I6B39 1997

327.124'054'09034-dc20 96-13146 CIP

ISBN 0 521 57085 9 hardback

ISBN 0 521 66360 1 paperback

Transferred to digital printing 2003

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870C. A. Bayly
FrontmatterMore information

Contents

List of maps	page viii
Preface	ix
Glossary	xi
List of abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	1
1 Prologue: surveillance and communication in early modern India	10
2 Political intelligence and indigenous informants during the conquest of India, c. 1785–1815	56
3 Misinformation and failure on the fringes of empire	97
4 Between human intelligence and colonial knowledge	142
5 The Indian ecumene: an indigenous public sphere	180
6 Useful knowledge and godly society, c. 1830–50	212
7 Colonial controversies: astronomers and physicians	247
8 Colonial controversies: language and land	284
9 The information order, the Rebellion of 1857–9 and pacification	315
10 Epilogue: information, surveillance and the public arena after the Rebellion	338
Conclusion: ‘Knowing the country’	365
Bibliography	377
Index	401

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
Frontmatter

More information

Maps

- | | |
|--|----------------|
| 1. The Indian subcontinent c. 1800 | page 11 |
| 2. The Ganges–Jumna Valley in the early nineteenth century | 57 |
| 3. Nepal and Burma | 98–9 |

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly

Frontmatter

More information

Preface

The germ of an idea for a history book is often sown by a contemporary moment. Coming back to India from east and south-east Asia one time in the later 1980s, I was struck by several paradoxes. In India, a society where literacy still struggled around the 40 or 50 per cent level, there flourished a massive publishing industry working in numerous languages and a vigorous, not to say violent, free press which made its contemporaries in 'educated' and 'technological' south-east and east Asia look tame and controlled. In this poor society, some forms of political and social knowledge were remarkably widely diffused: apparently uneducated people would come up to one in the bazaar to discourse on the demerits of Baroness Thatcher or Mr Gorbachev, while educated people in east and south-east Asia, let alone Britain, seemed to struggle to understand anything of the external world. Another paradox: an Indian government which was as inquisitive and paper-obsessed as its colonial ancestor was constantly putting its foot wrong because it was seemingly so ill-informed about happenings in the states and localities. This set me thinking about a study of the 'information order' of British India, a topic that would occupy the dead ground between what is now a vibrant social history of India and its apparently lifeless intellectual history.

This study is mainly concerned with the Hindi-speaking areas of north India, but it reaches out to other regions when particularly important changes originated there. What was emerging in the nineteenth century was, after all, an all-India information order. Equally, in the first chapter I have glanced backwards into the pre-colonial period with some trepidation, but with a firm conviction that historians of Mughal India and the eighteenth century need to be alerted to these important issues. One final point: this book often deals with the colonial power's Indian informants. In the absence of a modern nationalism, these men should not be regarded as 'informers' or traitors. In fact, it was from the descendants of the informants that many of the future nationalists would be drawn.

Large numbers of librarians, archivists and scholars have helped me in

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
Frontmatter

More information

x Preface

this venture. I can only mention a few individuals. At the India Office Library (Oriental and India Office Collections, British Library), Richard Bingle was unfailingly friendly and helpful. At the Centre of South Asian Studies in Cambridge, Lionel Carter responded cheerfully to endless requests for bibliographical help. The following have all provided assistance and advice, though they bear no responsibility for my use of it: Peter Burke, Stephen Blake, Nigel Chancellor, Simon Digby, Michael Fisher, Sumit Guha, Joanna Innes, Muzaffar Alam, Norbert Peabody, Anil Sethi and Thant Myint-U. Katherine Prior proved a just and eagle-eyed critic of the manuscript; among the other readers of parts of the manuscript who provided valuable comments were the readers for Cambridge University Press, Gordon Johnson, Richard Drayton and Robert Travers. Susan Bayly listened patiently to my ramblings on this subject over several years and heroically read rough early drafts. The book is dedicated to the memory of my father, Roy Ernest Bayly, Master Mariner (1917–94), who first told me stories of the East, but sadly did not live to see the book completed.

Glossary

akhbarat	a newsletter; cf. khabr: news; akhbar: newspaper.
Agarwal	a north Indian merchant caste.
banian	an agent or intermediary; cf. bania: a merchant.
banka	a 'bravo' or 'wide-boy'.
Banjara	pack-bullock owner.
bantiria	a forest watchman (Gorakhpur area).
Bedar	a 'tribal' and hunter community (Mysore area).
bhakti	devotion to god (Hinduism).
Brahmin	the Hindu priestly caste.
dak	post, conveyance of mail or people; cf. dak daroga: head postman; dak dauria: runner.
Dharma	righteousness (Hinduism); loosely 'religion'.
chaukidar	a watchman.
dacoitee	gang robbery.
dubash	an agent (lit. 'man of two languages').
Devanagari	the Sanskrit alphabet, used for modern Hindi.
gorait	a village watchman (Banaras area).
Gosain	a Hindu mendicant of Vaishnavite sect (q.v.).
Gujar	a pastoralist and agriculturalist caste of north India.
hakim	a physician in the Greek-Islamic tradition.
harkara	an intelligence agent (lit. 'do-all').
insha	the science of letter-writing: letter book.
jasus	spy.
Jat	a middle agriculturalist caste of north India.
jyotish	a Hindu astronomer/astrologer.
Kallar	a pastoralist and military caste of south India.
Kayastha	north Indian writer caste.
Khattri	a north Indian commercial and administrative caste.
kanungo	a rural registrar under the Mughals.
kassid	a runner.
kazi	a Muslim judge: under the British a registrar in a city.
kotwal	city magistrate: under the British the police chief.

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
FrontmatterMore information

xii Glossary

Kumboh	a (Muslim) writer community (Punjab).
mahajan	merchant title (lit. 'great man').
mahzar	a representation to authority.
majlis	an assembly, usually for Muslims.
maulvi	a Muslim cleric.
'Mewia'	a central Indian runner and tracker community.
mufti	expounder of law in a Muslim city.
muhtasib	superintendent of markets and morals.
Nyaya	a system of Hindu logic and philosophy.
Mug	[Magh] the Bengali name for Arakanese Buddhists.
munshi	a writer; secretary.
mushairah	a poetic competition.
nawab	deputy (to the Mughal emperor); a quasi-royal title in the eighteenth century; hence 'nabob'.
panchang	almanac.
panchayat	a tribunal or council.
pandit	a Hindu teacher, often Brahmin.
patwari	the village accountant.
pir	a title for a charismatic Muslim sufi teacher (q.v).
Purana	cosmologies and divine legends of medieval Hinduism.
qasbah	a small town often of Muslim foundation.
Rajput	the military north Indian royal and warrior caste.
sabha	meeting.
samaj	society, association.
sarkar	government.
sati	widow-burning.
Shaivite	a devotee of the deity Lord Shiva.
shastrartha	a formal Sanskrit debate.
Shia	the largest minority within Islam.
Siddhanta	'correct doctrines': Indian astronomy based on precise observation.
Sufi	an adept of mystical and esoteric knowledge within Islam.
Sunni	the majority sect within Islam.
surathal	a representation to authority.
Usuli	a school of Islamic law stressing rational interpretation.
vaidya	a physician within the Hindu tradition.
Vaishnavite	a devotee of the deity Lord Vishnu.
waqai navis	cf. waqai nigar: newswriter.
zamindar	a landowner.

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly
FrontmatterMore information

Abbreviations

Actg	Acting.
BC	Boards Collections, OIOC.
BL	British Library.
CPC	Calendar of Persian Correspondence.
Cons.	Consultations.
CUL	Cambridge University Library.
Dty	Deputy.
GG	Governor-General.
HI	Elliot, H.M. and J. Dowson, The History of India told by its own Historians.
HM	Home Miscellaneous Series, OIOC.
IESHR	Indian Economic and Social History Review.
JAS	Journal of Asian Studies.
JBRBS	Journal of the Burma Research Society
LH	Garcin de Tassy, J.H., Histoire de la Littérature Hindouie et Hindoustanie.
MAS	Modern Asian Studies.
NAI	National Archives of India, New Delhi.
NWP	North-Western Provinces.
OIOC	Oriental and India Office Collections, British Library.
Resdt	Resident.
UPCRO	Uttar Pradesh Central Records Office, Allahabad.

Note on transliteration

English transliterations of south Asian words have been in continuous change since 1750. To preserve original usages would give rise to archaicism and inconsistency, but modern scientific transliteration can obscure well-known names and places. Compromise and a degree of inconsistency is unavoidable. In the case of place-names, I have used the forms common in the later British gazetteers, except where contemporary Indian English usage has substituted acceptable alternatives (e.g.,

Cambridge University Press

0521663601 - Empire and Information: Intelligence Gathering and Social Communication
in India, 1780-1870

C. A. Bayly

Frontmatter

More information

xiv List of abbreviations

Kanpur, Pune, Banaras). In the case of personal names I have used modern transliteration except where famous individuals are still known by contemporary forms (e.g., Muhammad Shah, Ram Mohun Roy), or where the indigenous form is uncertain, in which case I have preserved 'corrupt' contemporary versions. With other words, I have used commonly accepted modern forms (thus 'kazi', but 'qasbah'). I have also preserved the transliterations used by modern translators even where they are variants of the norm.