This book is dedicated to the late Leo Fender, whose supreme mastery of the art of guitar design was unencumbered by an ability to play the instrument.

Acknowledgments

The idea for this book came to us on the day that we returned the corrected proofs of our last book to the publisher. That book had taken almost a decade to write, and we realised that we had to change our modus operandi. Ponderous debate gave way to reckless hastiness, and this book has been less than two years in preparation. If we have managed to produce a worthwhile text, it is in large measure due to the selfless support of family, friends and colleagues.

Draft material was read by Vinnie Farrell, Gordon Kennedy, Julie Kenny, Theresa McArdle, Prem Muthuvelu, Chris Quinn, Paul Rowlands, Jenny Smith, Gill Strong and Kate Wood. We are grateful for their thoughtful comments, which have improved the text considerably.

We must especially thank Sue Ruben, who read draft material, loaned us her cottage so that we could write without distraction, and painted the cover illustration. We also thank Steve Hammond for providing photographic services at short notice.

Our employers have generously supported the project through provision of study leave. We are particularly grateful to our medical managers, Giles Harbourne and David Fearnley, in this regard.

We seem to have developed a distinctive style of writing that creates books about psychiatry that are a little unconventional. We must thank Richard Marley of Cambridge University Press for his unstinting encouragement to produce books that say what we want to say in the way that we want to say it.

Finally, we must thank Greta, Geoff, Audrey and Arthur, who made all of this possible.

Author biographies

Rob Poole

Rob Poole grew up in South East London. He is a general adult psychiatrist with a strong interest in the psychological, social and cultural aspects of mental illness. After training at St George's Hospital, London and in Oxford, he worked for many years as a consultant psychiatrist in a deprived part of Liverpool, before moving to his current post in rural North Wales. He has extensive experience of leading service development and of establishing new models of team working. He has a strong background in teaching and postgraduate education, and he has dabbled in research.

Robert Higgs

Robert Higgs grew up in Cape Town. He had experience of working in general practice and public health medicine prior to training in psychiatry in Liverpool. This has helped to shape his psychosocial approach to psychiatric practice. He has worked as a general adult psychiatrist in Merseyside and Manchester, and he is presently the consultant psychiatrist for the Liverpool Assertive Outreach Team. His main interests have been in postgraduate medical education and training at all levels, and in reviewing adverse incidents in clinical practice both locally and nationally. He is an enthusiastic supporter of New Ways of Working for Psychiatrists.
