

Contents

|   |                |
|---|----------------|
| Series Foreword  | page xi |
| Preface  | xiii           |
| Introduction  | 1              |
| 1. Re-Searching Psychotherapy as a Social Practice                              | 3              |
| 1.1. The Received View in Research on Psychotherapy                             | 3              |
| 1.2. Process Studies in Sessions  | 5              |
| 1.3. Professional Centeredness and Desubjectification of Clients and Therapists | 7              |
| 1.4. Client Perspectives in Sessions  | 8              |
| 1.5. Clients as Agents, Consumers, and Users                                    | 10             |
| 1.6. How Does Therapy Work across Places?                                       | 12             |
| 1.7. Assuming Identical Client Functioning in Sessions and Elsewhere            | 14             |
| 1.8. Looking beyond Sessions  | 16             |
| 1.9. Taking Professional Charge of the Everyday                                 | 17             |
| 1.10. Re-Searching Changing Therapeutic and Everyday Practices                  | 19             |
| 2. Theorizing Persons in Structures of Social Practice                          | 21             |
| 2.1. Theorizing Social Practice   | 22             |
| 2.2. Persons as Situated Participants in Social Practice                        | 28             |
| 2.3. Personal Trajectories in a Complex Social Practice                         | 38             |
| 3. A Study – Its Design and Conduct   | 47             |
| 3.1. The Unit of Outpatient Child Psychiatry and the Project                    | 47             |
| 3.2. The Interviews   | 48             |
| 3.3. Relations between the Interviews and the Ongoing Therapy                   | 50             |
| 3.4. Studying the Everyday Lives of Persons Attending Therapy                   | 52             |
| 3.5. The Chosen Case and Its Therapy  | 54             |
| 4. Clients’ Ordinary Lives Plus Sessions  | 58             |
| 4.1. Getting Outside Help   | 58             |
| 4.2. Having Problems  | 61             |
|   | vii            |

|      |  |     |
|------|--|-----|
| viii | Contents  |     |
|      | 4.3. Orientation toward Therapy  | 66  |
|      | 4.4. What Can Therapists Do?   | 68  |
|      | 4.5. Participation in Sessions   | 71  |
|      | 4.6. Diverse Perspectives, Modes of Participation, and Stakesin Sessions | 75  |
|      | 4.7. Diverse Re-Interpretations of Sessions Elsewhere                        | 76  |
|      | 4.8. Struggles over Sessions and Their Uses                                  | 79  |
| 5.   | Therapy in Clients' Social Practice across Places                            | 84  |
|      | 5.1. Diverse Modes of Participation in Diverse Contexts                      | 84  |
|      | 5.2. Particular Features of Sessions Work in ConflictualPractices        | 89  |
|      | 5.3. Ways to Include Sessions at Home  | 93  |
|      | 5.4. Pursuing Concerns and Gathering Stances across Timesand Places      | 99  |
|      | 5.5. Experience, Reflection, and Talk across Contexts                        | 104 |
| 6.   | Changes in Clients' Practice across Places                                   | 109 |
|      | 6.1. Understanding Change  | 109 |
|      | 6.2. Changing from Different Angles  | 111 |
|      | 6.3. Continuing Pursuits and Other Conflicts                                 | 119 |
|      | 6.4. When Have We Had Enough?  | 124 |
|      | 6.5. Changing Understandings of Change                                       | 128 |
| 7.   | Changing Problems across Places  | 141 |
|      | 7.1. Focus and Frame   | 141 |
|      | 7.2. The Course of Changing Problems   | 142 |
|      | 7.3. Problems Subside, Vary, and Flare Up                                    | 157 |
|      | 7.4. One Problem after Another   | 167 |
|      | 7.5. Re-Considering Changing Problems  | 172 |
| 8.   | The Conduct of Everyday Life and the LifeTrajectory                      | 181 |
|      | 8.1. The Conduct of Everyday Life  | 181 |
|      | 8.2. The Life Trajectory   | 189 |
| 9.   | The Children's Changing Conducts of Everyday Lifeand Life Trajectories   | 198 |
|      | 9.1. Angie   | 198 |
|      | 9.2. Donna   | 211 |
| 10.  | The Parents' Changing Conducts of Everyday Lifeand Life Trajectories     | 226 |
|      | 10.1. Mary   | 226 |
|      | 10.2. Paul   | 241 |

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| Contents   | ix  |
| 11. The Changing Conduct of Everyday Family Lifeand Family Trajectory | 255 |
| 11.1. The Changing Conduct of Everyday Family Life                        | 257 |
| 11.2. The Changing Family Trajectory                                      | 270 |
| 12. Research in Social Practice   | 287 |
| 12.1. Researching Persons in Social Practice                              | 287 |
| 12.2. Conceptual Dimensions and Outcomes of the Project                   | 294 |
| 12.3. Empirical Dimensions and Outcomes of the Project                    | 302 |
| 12.4. Uses of Research in Social Practice                                 | 309 |
| References   | 315 |
| Author Index   | 327 |
| Subject Index  | 329 |