

Contents

	page
List of figures	ix
Preface	xi
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Organism into artefact	3
1.2 Fighting the modernist cause – a lost cause?	7
1.3 Turning constructivism downside up	9
1.4 The impact of Antiquity, or the power of anachronism	13
1.5 Nationalism: promoter of historical scholarship?	16
2 The modernist paradigm: strengths and weaknesses	20
2.1 Nationalism without nationalists	22
2.2 Strengths and shortcomings	23
2.3 Fake communities by ‘fake’ constructivists	26
2.4 Modernist myopia and the ‘invention of tradition’	29
3 Foundations of a new nationalism theory	34
3.1 How to describe the nation?	35
3.2 Equality and multipolarity	38
3.3 The nation: a product of failed imperialisms	40
3.4 Competing for honour and freedom	44
3.5 Definitions	47
4 Killing and dying for love: the common fatherland	50
4.1 Cicero and the construction of the ideal patriot	53
4.2 Ascetic love	58
4.3 Patriotic distortions of politics	60
4.4 Patriotism’s smooth transition from republic to principate	62
4.5 From earth to heaven and back: the Middle Ages	64
4.6 A multitude of New Israels and New Romes	66
4.7 Legal scholars: the King’s patriotic citizens	69
4.8 The downgrading of Empire and Papacy	71
5 Competing for honour: the making of nations in late medieval Europe	78
5.1 Corporative honour: ‘nationes’ at medieval universities	79
5.2 From concrete to abstract communities: the ‘nationes’ at the Council of Constance	81
	vii

viii	Contents
	5.3 The new dimensions of national honour	88
	5.4 National honour: symptom of an overheating economy of honour	95
	5.5 How to measure the standing of a nation?	98
	5.6 National honour: remedy for an overheating economy of honour	101
6	The nationalist transformation of borders and languages	104
	6.1 ‘Tongue’ as political space	106
	6.2 ‘Adam was a German’	108
	6.3 Purifying the German language (and the German people)	110
	6.4 The limited originality of Romantic nationalism	116
7	Humanist nationalism	119
	7.1 Renaissance humanism – an innovative anachronism	121
	7.2 Barbarising the French or how Italian humanists successfully fought reality	142
	7.3 The Emperor’s independent supporters: humanist nationalists in Germany	152
	7.4 The interdependence of nationalist isolation and assimilation	156
	7.5 Germany – the (yet-to-be) civilised nation	159
	7.6 Germany – the authentic nation	167
8	A German Emperor for the German people	180
	8.1 The introduction of nationality as an election criterion	182
	8.2 The impact of popular xenophobia	187
	8.3 From German hero to Spanish invader – the transformation of Emperor Charles V	189
9	Nation and denomination	196
	9.1 Martin Luther’s German nation	199
	9.2 The authentic nation of Protestants vs. the civilised nation of Catholics	206
	9.3 The continuity of a non-confessional national discourse	209
10	Conclusion	212
	10.1 Nationalism and confessional fundamentalism	213
	10.2 The modern legacy of the ancient learned politician	215
	10.3 Coda	219
	Bibliography of works cited	221
	Primary sources	221
	Secondary sources	226
	Index	235