Rousseau, Law and the Sovereignty of the People

Together with Plato's Republic, Jean-Jacques Rousseau's Social Contract is regarded as one of the most original examples of utopian political engineering in the history of ideas. Similar to the Republic, Rousseau's masterwork is better known today for its author's idiosyncratic view of political justice than its lessons on lawmaking or governance in any concrete sense. Challenging this common view, Rousseau, Law and the Sovereignty of the People examines the Genevan's contributions as a legislator and builder of institutions, relating his major ideas to issues and debates in twenty-first century political science. Ethan Putterman explores how Rousseau's just state would actually operate, investigating how laws would be drafted, ratified and executed, arguing that the theory of the Social Contract is more pragmatic and populist than many scholars assume today.

Ethan Putterman is Assistant Professor at the Department of Political Science, National University of Singapore. He is a past Fellow in the Society for the Liberal Arts in the College at the University of Chicago.
Rousseau, Law and the Sovereignty of the People

ETHAN PUTTERMAN
To Iris
It is to law alone that men owe justice and freedom. It is this healthy instrument of the will of all that reestablishes, as a right, the natural equality among men. It is this celestial voice that tells each citizen the precepts of public reason, and teaches him to act according to the maxims of his own judgment and not to be in contradiction with himself.

Discourse on Political Economy, 1755
Contents

Acknowledgments | page viii
---|---
A note on the text | x
List of abbreviations | xi

Introduction: The celestial voice
1. Rousseau’s concept of law | 10
2. Agenda-setting and majority rule | 40
3. Democracy and vote rigging | 72
4. Popular sovereignty and the republican fear of large assemblies | 96
5. Enforcing the laws in Poland and Corsica | 122
6. Judging the laws/when legislation fails | 146

Conclusion: Law and liberty
173

Select bibliography | 179
Name index | 183
Subject index | 185
Acknowledgments

I am grateful to the National University of Singapore and the University of Chicago for financial support during the writing of this book. I would like to thank the University Press of New England for permission to cite extensively from the excellent translations of Rousseau's works in the Collected Writings of Rousseau (volumes 1–12). This extraordinary collection of translations is an invaluable resource to Rousseau scholars around the world. In addition, I wish to thank the editors and publishers of the American Political Science Review and Political Studies for permission to reprint the revised drafts of articles that appear in Chapters 2 and 5. The original versions of these articles appeared in APSR, 97:3 (August 2003) with a subsequent debate with John T. Scott in APSR, 99 (February 2005) and Political Studies, 49:3 (August 2001).

At the outset, I wish to thank Tracy B. Strong and John P. McCormick for providing thoughtful and lengthy comments to the manuscript for this book. Their respective contributions are especially evident in my discussion of the laws and Rome in Chapters 1 and 3. I am also grateful to Roger D. Masters for a critical reading of an early draft of Chapter 6 (as an unpublished APSA paper). I regard Professor Masters as the standard-bearer on the topic of Rousseau's political philosophy in the world today. I also wish to thank John Haslam at Cambridge University Press and Sarah Price and Gail Welsh at Out of House Publishing Solutions, Ltd. During my academic life I have benefited enormously from the teachings of an exemplary roster of distinguished professors. This was never more so than during my graduate years as a student in the Department of Political Science at the University of Chicago. The person to whom I am most indebted from this time is Bernard Manin. This book would have been inconceivable without his invaluable guidance and encouragement over many years. Bernard is a true mentor and friend. I am also indebted to Robert Morrissey, William Sewell and François Furet. Much of what I know about the intellectual history of the French Revolution I learned from Professor Furet.

I also want to thank four exemplary educators whose involvement in my professional and personal life extended far beyond the classroom: Marvin Zonis, Moishe Postone, Terry Nardin and Dr Anne Bohm of the London School of Economics. At critical stages of my academic career the concerned involvement of each of these four individuals was instrumental to my remaining within the profession. It is indeed true that some debts can never be repaid. For different reasons, I also wish to thank Jon Elster, Alexander Kaufman, Cameron M. Burns, Brad Williams, Kyaw Yin Hlaing, Lee Lai To, Constantin Fasolt, Nathan Tarcov, Mads Qvortrup, and Ed Mensa.

More than anybody else the person to whom I owe the greatest debt for becoming a political theorist is David Mapel of the University of Colorado at Boulder. Together with David Gross in the Department of History both scholars inspired my early love of political philosophy.

Lastly, and most importantly, I wish to thank my family, Josh Putterman, Suzanne Gordon, Scott Webster, Walden Putterman, Talia Putterman, Maurice and Rachel Elkabas and – most of all – my parents, Carol Adams and Alan Putterman for everything that each has given me over many years. This book is dedicated to my wife, Iris Putterman.
A note on the text

The page numbers and citations from Rousseau's writings in this book refer to:

All other references to Rousseau's writings not found in these collected editions refer to the translations listed in the bibliography.
Abbreviations

C  Confessions
CGP  Considerations on the Government of Poland
CS  Social Contract
DI  Discourse on Inequality Among Men
DSA  Discourse on the Arts and Sciences
DV  Discourse on the Virtue Most Necessary for a Hero
E  Emile
EOL  Essay on the Origin of Languages
EP  Discourse on Political Economy
FP  Political Fragments
JNH  Julie or the New Eloise
LA  Letter to M. Alembert
LCB  Letter to Christopher Beaumont
LEM  Letters Written from the Mountain
LV  Letter to Voltaire
MG  Geneva Manuscript
ML  Moral Letters
N  Narcissus, or the Lover of Himself
PC  Project for Corsica
RJJ  Rousseau: Judge of Jean Jacques
RPS  Reveries of the Solitary Walker