Contents

List of figures  xii
List of tables  xiii
Preface  xv

1 The appeal and reality of ethical consumerism  1
   The ethical consumer and myth  1
   Ethical consumerism versus consumer social responsibility  9
   Moving from ethical consumer to CNSR  11

2 Social consumerism in the context of corporate responsibility  16
   Social consumerism and firm profitability  16
      Economic profit  17
      Willingness to pay and CNSR  18
      Economic profit in light of CNSR  23
   Firm and market reactions to social consumption  24
   Firms and the social consumption context  28
      The evolution of preferences and the role of the firm  33
      The ethical consumer and CSR  35

3 Are we what we choose? Or is what we choose what we are?  37
   Radical attitudes, conservative behaviors  37
   Understanding the nature of consumer choice  40
      Archetypes of consumer behavior  41
         Consumers as rational informed processors  41
         Consumers as quasi-rational reactive purchasers  41
         Consumers as quasi-rational co-producers of value  42
         Consumers as actors for the adaptive unconscious  42
      The consumer as vox populi  43
      The consumer as evolved ape  46
   Two meta-models of social consumer behavior  48
      A linear model of social consumption  48
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>x</th>
<th>Contents</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| | A recursive model of social consumption 51
| | Implications of the models 53
| | The attitude–behavior gap and its implication for measurement 56
| | The four methodological flaws: incentive compatibility, comparability, inference, and context 56
| | Increasing the predictive validity of intentions 59
| | The myth of ethical consumption; the reality of social consumption 60
| 4 | Ethical consumers or social consumers? Measurement and reality 64
| | The importance of the consumer 64
| | Experimentation and consumer social behavior 67
| | Are we willing to put our money where our conscience is? 72
| | Discrete choice experimentation 72
| | The components of study no. 1 74
| | Ethical disposition inventory 76
| | The MORI poll 79
| | The study sample 79
| | Willingness to consider/purchase; willingness to pay 79
| | How valuable is providing information? 86
| | Can we believe what consumers say when not constrained? 87
| | The link between surveys and experiments 87
| | Will consumers sacrifice functionality? 94
| | Global segments of social consumers 98
| | The structure of study no. 2 98
| | The sample 99
| | Product features and structure of the experiments 99
| | Global segments 102
| | Demographics again 106
| | Does “social” segment position exist independent of product context? 106
| | Segment size and country differentiation 108
| | The importance of recall 109
| | Ethical consumerism in light of experimental reality 112
| | Assessing the myth 116
| 5 | Rationalization and justification of social (non-)consumption 117
| | The contribution of interpretative methods to understanding CNSR 118
| | An interpretative approach 120
Contents

Understanding varying social consumption rationales ............................... 123
  The economic rationalists .................................................. 124
  The governmental dependents ............................................ 126
  The developmental realists ............................................... 128
  Currents of logic and justification .................................... 132
  Interpreting the myth ..................................................... 134

6 The ethical consumer, politics, and everyday life ................................. 137
  From the consumer context to the perspective of the citizen .................. 137
  A pound for human rights, a penny for genetically modified food: a glimpse at measuring social issue priorities ........................................... 140
  Seeing the citizen: estimating general societal preferences ................. 152
  The consumer as citizen: linking social and consumer preference ......... 162

7 Tastes, truths, and strategies ..................................................... 166
  De gustibus non est disputandum ........................................... 166
  The inconvenient empirical truths ....................................... 172
  The convenient empirical truths ......................................... 176
  Strategies for enhancing C0SR ........................................... 179
  Jettisoning the myth ....................................................... 183

Appendix 1 Description of country choices and participant sampling ............ 188
Appendix 2 Ethical disposition survey: the MORI poll and ethics scales ......... 195
Appendix 3 Latent class finite mixture modeling .................................. 201
Appendix 4 Semi-structured interview guide used in all countries ............... 203
Appendix 5 The logic of best–worst scaling .................................... 206
Appendix 6 Australia omnibus social, economic, and political preference study ....................................................... 209

Notes ................................................................................. 216
References ........................................................................... 219
Index .................................................................................. 232