

Index

- addiction see compulsive computer use Anderson, K., 165
 asceticism, 16, 17, 22
 ASE (Advanced Software Engineering)
 division, 70
 assessment in R&D unit, 84–5
 and indeterminacy, 154–7, 163–72, 190–1
 Atkinson, Paul, 156
- Becker, Howard, 57
 Bedworth, Paul, 14, 20, 27
 Bloomfield, Brian, 12, 43–4
- body
 in computer-mediated communication, 44–5, 178–85
 mind/body dualism, 16, 22
 neglect of physical self, 14, 15–16, 19 role in gender system, 193–5 Bourdieu, Pierre, 152–3, 154, 157
- case study see Softech R&D unit Cleveland, Harland, 187 clients, relationship with, 31–2, 33, 75–7, 111–14
 Cockburn, C., 150–1
 commercialisation, 31–3, 75–6 see also market focus; professionalisation communication see computer-mediated communication; social skills competition, 15
 compulsive computer use, 8, 13–19, 77–8, 92 computer camps and clubs, 3 computer culture, 10–12 competing discourses in, 195, 196 dualisms in, 40, 41
 and masculinity, 19–24, 25–6
 and members, 10–11, 12–17
 social behaviour in, 26–7 women's marginalisation in, 24–5 see also occupational computer culture
- computer industry approach to workers, 33–4, 86–7, 166 changing skill requirements, 35–7 commercialisation of, 31–3, 75–6 pressures of 1980s, 30–1
 see also professionalisation computer professionals
 choice of career, 90–4
 choice of employer, 96–7 compared with support staff, 139 dissatisfaction and departure, 120–1 divisions of R&D unit, 69–71
 entrance program, 78, 97–9
 ‘first division’, 140–5, 160, 161–2
 ‘good Softech person’, 78–81, 166–7
 human–computer interface, 108–14 industry approaches to, 33–4, 86–7, 166
 informal learning, 83–4, 99–102
 intrinsic and extrinsic motivations, 90–4, 120–1, 141–4
 occupational identity, 94–5, 120–1
 opportunities for women see optimism
 recruitment, 72–4, 81, 96, 155
 relationship with clients, 31–2, 33, 75–7, 111–14
 skill requirements changing, 35–7 skills and value of, 65–6, 71–2, 78–81;
 see also social skills; technical skills
 technical teamwork, 102–8
 see also hybrid workers; management;
 occupational computer culture;
 professionalisation
- computer science
 indeterminate gender basis of, 1 optimism about women in, 1–2 sex distribution of courses, 2–4
- computer users
 changing relationship with developers, 31–2
 compulsive use, 8, 13–19, 77–8, 92 and computer culture, 10–11, 13–19

206 Index

- intrinsic and extrinsic motivations, 90–4, 120–1, 141–4
- social behaviour of, 26–7
- see also* clients; computer professionals
- computer-mediated communication
 - disruptive potential of, 44–5, 176–85
 - fantasy and game environments, 180–4
- computer/s
 - disruptive power of, 176
 - link with culture, 9
 - as projective medium, 43–4, 174–6
 - as social transformer, 44–8, 176–85
- computing
 - culture of see computer culture
 - economic significance of, 25
 - in education, 2–5
 - as gender-neutral, 1, 27
 - as male-dominated, 8–9, 25–6
 - occupational, 5–7
 - opportunities for women see optimism
 - recreational, 7–8
 - women in, 2–9, 26, 40, 41
 - women's avoidance of, 24
- confidence, 129, 131, 162
- corporate culture, 64–5
- Cringley, R. X., 16, 27
- Cucchiari, S., 147–8
- culture
 - corporate, 64–5
 - defining, 10
 - link with IT, 9
 - see also* computer culture; occupational computer culture
- cyberspace
 - identity disruption in, 44–5, 180–5
 - see also* email; Internet
- cyborgs, 45–6

- Deakin, Rosemary, 37, 38
- Delamont, Sara, 156
- DeMarco, Tom, 33–4
- dispositional exclusion, 152–7, 168–70
- dualisms
 - of computer culture, 40, 41
 - of science and technology, 21–2
- Duveen, G., 147

- educational computing, 2–5
- educational qualifications, 3–5, 90
- email, 176–8, 179, 180
- employees see computer professionals
- entrance program, 78, 97–9
- ethnographic research
 - critiques and responses, 53–7
 - nature of, 51–2
 - official and competing accounts, 58–60
 - techniques used, 61–3
 - as 'truth', 57–8, 60–1
- exclusion
 - based on disposition, 152–7, 168–70
 - based on indeterminate elements, 156–7, 167–8
 - of women from computing, 26
 - of women from 'inner circle', 156–7, 161–2
 - see also* social closure
- fantasy/game environment, 180–4
- feminine principles, marginalised, 23, 24
- feminism
 - analyses of computer culture, 40–1
 - analyses of science and technology, 21–2
- flair, 80–1, 166–7

- gender
 - in computer-mediated communication, 179–80, 182, 183, 184–5
 - computing as gender-neutral, 1, 27
 - and skill, 146, 160–2; social skills, 188, 190
 - and skill assessment, 146–52, 157–8, 188–9; indeterminacy in, 163–72
 - and skill differentiation, 151–7
 - Softtech approach to, 86–7, 169–70
 - see also* men; optimism; women
- gender bias, denial of, 169–70
- gender categorisation, 147–8
- gender relations, in computer culture, 89
- gender system
 - persistence of, 192–5
 - role of body in, 193–5
- genius, concept of, 79–80
- Gerver, Elizabeth, 2
- Glastonbury, B., 26

- habitus, 152–5, 156
- Hacker, S., 16–17, 22
- hackers see compulsive computer use
- Hammersley, M., 57
- Haraway, Donna, 45–6, 47
- hard mastery, 38–9
- Hawking, Stephen, 143
- HCI (Human–Computer Interaction)
 - division, 70–1, 109–10, 113
- Henwood, Flis, 149, 150
- hierarchy see organisational structure; professional hierarchy
- High-Tech Illusion, 33–4, 166
- higher education, 3–5, 90

- Hochschild, A. H., 165 human nature and consciousness and computers, 42–4, 174–6 see also identity; self
 human–computer interface
 employees' impressions of, 108–14
see also HCI
 hybrid nature of R&D work, 66
 hybrid workers, 35–7
 female, 126–9; case of Sam, 123–5; potential of, 37–9, 86, 187–8 gender differences, 187–8
 and indeterminacy, 166–8
 male, 129–32; case of James, 122–3
 in R&D unit, 74, 77–81
- identity
 and computer-mediated communication, 44–5, 178–85
 occupational, 94–5, 120–1
 indeterminacy
 and gendered skills assessment, 156–7, 163–72
 and habitus, 152–7
 and organisational features, 190–1 informal learning system, 83–4, 99–102 Internet
 sex differences in use of, 8
see also cyberspace; email interpersonal skills see social skills interviews see recruitment
 IT, link with culture, 9
- Jamous, H., 154–5, 156, 157 jargon, 11, 23–4
- KBS (Knowledge-Based Systems) division, 69–70
- Keller, Evelyn Fox, 21
 knowledge, politics of, 151 knowledge-based professions, gender and skills of, 151–7
- Lawrence, Ruth, 143–4, 162
 learning
 entrance program, 78, 97–9
 informal system, 83–4, 99–102
- Lister, Timothy, 33–4
 Lloyd, B., 147
- management, 81–3, 114–20, 130–1
 market focus anxieties about, 132–40
see also commercialisation;
 professionalisation
- masculinity, and computer culture, 19–24, 25–6
- Mead, Margaret, 147
- media, and computer culture, 24
- men
 career dissatisfaction, 121–2 choice of computing career, 90–2 domination of computing, 8–9, 25–6
 and entrance program, 97, 98–9
 and human–computer interface, 111–14
 as hybrid workers, 122–3, 129–32
 and informal learning, 99–100
 intrinsic interest in computers, 90–2, 141–2, 143
 and management, 116–18, 130–1
 occupational identity, 94
 social labour of, 165
 social skills of, 130–2 technical skills of, 129–30, 131–2
 and technical teamwork, 103–4
- mind/body dualism, 16, 22
- Mitnick, Kevin, 13–14, 27
- occupational computer culture, 18–19, 23
 competing discourses, 58–60, 125–6, 195, 196
 dissatisfaction, 120–1
 gender relations, 89
 human–computer interface, 108–14
 impact of professionalisation on, 158–61
 learning process, 97–102
 management, 81–3, 114–20, 130–1
 problems of traditional, 30–1
 technical teamwork, 102–8
 traditional nature of, 158, 160–2
see also computer professionals;
 corporate culture
- occupational identity, 94–5
 dissatisfaction, 120–1
- occupations
 move toward social labour, 186–7 women in computing, 5–7
see also professions
- official ideologies, and competing discourses, 58–60, 125–6, 195, 196
- optimism about women in computing first wave, 1–2; legitimacy of, 2 pessimism and hope, 195–6 researching legitimacy of, 50 second wave, 30, 37–40, 41–2, 159;
 legitimacy of, 187–92
 third wave, 42, 173–4; computer as projective medium, 43–4, 174–6; computer as social transformer, 44–8, 176–85; legitimacy of, 192–5

208 Index

- organisational structure
 and indeterminacy, 171–2, 190–1
 management, 81–3, 114–20, 130–1 threat of disruption to, 177–8 see also professional hierarchy
- Parris, Mathew, 20
- peer review, 85, 190
- Peloille, B., 154–5, 156, 157
- personnel see computer professionals
- Phillips, Anne, 148–9
- physical self see body
- Plant, Sadie, 47
- Poster, Mark, 44–5
- professional hierarchy, 139–40
 ‘first division’, 140–5, 160, 161–2
see also organisational structure
- professionalisation
 concerns about, 132–40
 impact on computer culture, 75, 158–61 as threat to indeterminate skills, 155–6
see also commercialisation
- professionalism
 concepts of, 74–8
 Softech approach to gender and, 87
- professions
 gender and skills in knowledge-based, 151–7
see also computer professionals;
 occupations
- programming, gendered approaches to, 38–9
- qualitative research see ethnographic research
- R&D (research and development) see
 Softech R&D unit
- recreational computing fantasy and identity, 180–4
 women in, 7–8
see also compulsive computer use
- recruitment, 72–4, 81, 96, 155
 entrance program, 78, 97–9
- research see ethnographic research; Softech
 R&D unit
- reviews, 84–5, 103
- Rheingold, H., 182
- salaries
 sex differences in, 7
see also Standard Charge Rate
- science and technology dualisms of, 21–2
 gendered nature of, 1
- SCR (Standard Charge Rate), 63, 84–5
- self computers as metaphor for, 43–4, 174–6 impact of computer on, 43, 44–5
see also identity
- service sector, 186
- skill assessment
 indeterminacy and gender in, 156–7, 163–72
 in recruitment process, 73–4
 relationship with gender, 146–52, 157–8, 188–9
- skills
 changing requirements, 35–7 gender and differentiation of, 151–7 of R&D unit members, 65–6
 relationship with gender, 146, 160–2
 of women, 37–9, 86, 190
see also social skills; technical skills
- social closure
 around women’s skills, 190
 in traditional computing culture, 158, 161–2
see also exclusion
- social labour, and gender, 187
- social skills
 assessing, 164–6, 189–90; in recruitment process, 73, 74
 gender differences, 188, 190; men’s, 130–2; women’s, 127–8
 increasing importance of, 32, 33, 76–7, 186–7
 relationship with creativity, 134 and technical competence, 78–81
- social transformation, role of computer, 44–8, 176–85
- soft mastery, 38–9
- Softech R&D unit
 approach to gender, 86–7, 169–70 assessment in, 84–5, 190–1 as case study choice, 50–1; ethnographic techniques, 61–3
 company background, 64
 competing discourses, 58–60, 125–6, 195, 196
 corporate goals, 64–5
 dissatisfaction and departure from, 120–1
 employee choice of, 96–7
 entrance program, 78, 97–9
 geography and environment, 67–9
 ‘good Softech person’, 78–81, 166–7
 human–computer interface, 108–14
 hybrid workers, 74, 77–81, 126–32, 166–8; case of James, 122–3; case of

- Sam, 123–5
 impact of professionalisation on, 132–40, 158–61
 management, 81–3, 114–20, 130–1 organisational context, 69–71
 professional hierarchy, 139–45, 160, 161–2
 professionalism, 74–8
 as ‘progressive’ organisation, 163–72, 190–1
 recruitment, 72–4, 81, 96
 role of unit, 65–7, 86
 technical teamwork, 102–8
 training and informal learning, 83–4, 99–102 treatment of personnel, 67, 86–7, 166 value of human capital, 71–2
see also computer professionals
 software projects, unsuccessful, 33–4 Speech division, 70
 Spender, Dale, 151
 Standard Charge Rate (SCR), 63, 84–5 style, 80–1, 166–7
 support staff, 139
- Taylor, Barbara, 148–9
 teamwork, 39, 77, 102–8 technical creativity, anxieties about dilution of, 132–40
 technical skills
 men’s, 129–30, 131–2
 and social competence, 78–81
 women’s, 126–7
 technical teamwork, 102–8
 technical workers, ‘first division’, 140–5, 160, 161–2 technology see science and technology training, 83
 entrance program, 78, 97–9
 informal learning, 83–4, 99–102
- Traweek, Sharon, 151–2
 truth, ethnographic research as, 57–8, 60–1 Turkle, Sherry, 16, 38–9, 42–3, 44, 45
- Van Maanen, John, 57
 vocabulary of computer culture, 11, 23–4
- wages see salaries; Standard Charge Rate Weizenbaum, Joseph, 13, 20
 Williams, Shirley, 2
- women
 avoidance of computing, 24
 career dissatisfaction, 122
 computing as career, 5–7, 93–4 computing in education, 2–5 computing opportunities for see optimism
 and entrance program, 97–8
 excluded and marginalised, 24, 26, 40, 41; from ‘inner circle’, 156–7, 161–2 extrinsic motivations, 93–4, 142–4
 and human–computer interface, 109–14
 as hybrid workers, 37–9, 86, 123–5, 126–9, 187–8
 and informal learning, 101–2
 and management, 116, 117, 118–19
 occupational identity, 94–5
 problems of ‘progressive’ organisation for, 190–1 in recreational computing, 7–8 skills of, 37–9, 86, 190; social skills, 127–8; technical skills, 126–7
 social labour of, 165
 and technical teamwork, 104–8 underrepresented in computing, 2; women in computing, problems of research on, 28–9n.1
- Zelditch, Morris (Jr), 54–5