The Archaeology of Urban Landscapes

Explorations in Slumland

This exciting collection on a new movement in urban archaeology investigates the history of urban slums. The stuff that is dug up – broken kitchen china, glass grog bottles, and innumerable tonnes of building debris, nails and plaster samples – will not quickly find its way into museum collections. But, properly interpreted, it yields evidence of lives that have left little in the way of written records. Including eleven case studies, five on cities in the United States and one each on London and Sheffield, and further chapters on Cape Town, Sydney, Melbourne and Quebec City, this collection maps out a new field, which will attract the attention of a range of students, including those outside archaeology such as historical sociologists and historians.

ALAN MAYNE is Associate Professor in the Department of History, University of Melbourne. His publications include Fever, Squalor and Vice (1982), Representing the Slum (1991), The Imagined Slum (1993) and Reluctant Italians (1997).

TIM MURRAY is Professor of Archaeology and Head of the School of Historical and European Studies at La Trobe University. He has written, with Judy Birmingham, Historical Archaeology of Australia: A Handbook, and edited The Archaeology of Aboriginal Australia (1998), Time and Archaeology (1999), The Great Archaeologists, 2 vols. (1999), (with Atholl Anderson) Australian Archaeologist (2000) and History and Discoveries, 3 vols. (2001).
