Redeeming the Communist Past

This major study examines one of the most surprising developments in East Central European politics after the democratic transitions of 1989: the completely unexpected regeneration of the former communist parties. After the collapse of the communist regimes in 1989, these ruling communist parties seemed consigned to oblivion. However, confounding scholarly and popular expectations, all of them survived, and some have even returned to power.

This in-depth, comparative study systematically analyzes the trajectories of four cases: the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland, and Hungary (with additional examination of other authoritarian party successors). Relying on extensive and unprecedented primary research, this analysis employs a consistent analytical framework that combines the peculiarities of the postsocialist cases with broad theoretical concerns of institutional analysis, party politics, and democratic transitions and consolidation.

ANNA M. GRZYMAŁA-BUSSE is assistant professor of political science at Yale University. Her doctoral dissertation was awarded the Gabriel Almond Award for Best Dissertation in Comparative Politics by the American Political Science Association.

Acknowledgments

Most of the research for this book was done in the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Hungary, Poland, and Germany, throughout 1996–8. Much of it would have been impossible without the kindness of many colleagues and friends in the region. I greatly benefited from the assistance and advice of, among others, Attila Ágh, Zora Bútorová, Michał Federowicz, György Földes, Peter Havas, Michal Illner, Wojciech Kaźmierczak, László Keri, János Kornai, Darina Malová, Grigorij Mesežníkov, Gero Neugebauer, Andrzej Rychard, Dieter Segert, Dana Šivaková, Andrej Školkaj, Jindříška Syllová, Jonathan Stein, Gábor Tóka, Peter Talas, Pal Tamás, Zbysław Thomas, Jiří Večerník, Rafał Wiśniewski, and Vera Žežulková. The East-West Institute in Prague, the Institute of Sociology at the Czech Academy of Sciences, the Political Faculty of Comenius University, Central European University and the Open Society Archives in Budapest, and the Institute of Politics and Sociology of the Polish Academy of Sciences all graciously hosted me at various points.

In the United States, I am grateful to many friends and colleagues, whose comments, criticisms, and advice have greatly improved this book. Several have read different parts of the manuscript, including Peter Andreas, Grzegorz Ekiert, Peter Hall, and Gary King. I am especially grateful to those who read the manuscript in its entirety: Joshua Berke, Kanchan Chandra, Ellen Comisso, Stephen Hanson, Pauline Jones Luong, Herbert Kitschelt, and Andrew Schwartz. Tassos Kalandrakis, Gary King, and Ken Shepsle patiently answered various technical questions, while Gary Bass, Marc Busch, and Tim Snyder provided a great deal of advice. Ben Frommer, Abby Innes, Kevin Krause, and Diana Morlang shared war stories, data, and sources alike. Above all, I am indebted to Timothy Colton, Grzegorz Ekiert, and Peter Hall, each of whom brought a wealth of wisdom and advice to this project in all its stages. They remain a source of inspiration, trenchant criticism, and high standards. I am also grateful to the anonymous reviewers, who offered helpful comments, suggestions, and critiques. Lew Bateman at Cambridge University Press and Margaret Levi were wonderful editors, and their advice was as expert as it was helpful. Megan Dean diligently checked the bibliography, and Nate Jensen compiled the index. Any shortcomings, needless to say, remain my own.

My peripatetic research and writing was supported by several institutions: the American Council of Learned Societies, the Brookings Institution, the German-American Center for Visiting Scholars, the Harvard Academy for Area and International Studies, the Krupp Foundation, the Mellon Foundation, the Davis Center for Russian Studies, the Program for the Study of Germany and Europe, Yale University, and above all, the Center for European Studies at Harvard University, source of both material and intellectual sustenance.

This book is dedicated to my parents – their fierce love, unconditional support, and penchant for dinnertime debates have been my encouragement and my strength. The final thanks goes to Joshua Berke, whose love, clarity of thought, and wit have made this project, and so many others, a delight.
