

---

CONTENTS

---

Acknowledgments	page vii
Introduction	1
1 A Troubled Paradise: Utopia and Transgression in Comedies of the Early 1930s	17
2 Working Ladies and Forgotten Men: Class Divisions in Romantic Comedy, 1934–1937	47
3 “The Split-Pea Soup and the Succotash”: Frank Capra’s 1930s Comedies and the Subject of Class	67
4 Is Class Necessary?: Preston Sturges and Howard Hawks in the Early 1940s	95
5 Desperately Seeking Status: Class, Gender, and Social Anxiety in Postwar Hollywood Comedy	125
6 Is There a Class in This Text?: Woody Allen and Postmodern Comedy	155
7 Yuppies and Other Strangers: Class Satire and Cultural Clash in Contemporary Film Comedy	179
Notes	213
Works Cited	231
Index	237