

Contents

List of illustrations	page vii
Notes on contributors	viii
Acknowledgments	xii
Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction: Milton's gendered subjects Catherine Gimelli Martin	I
PART I MASCULINITY, DIVORCE, AND MISOGYNY IN MILTON'S PROSE
1 The gender of civic virtue Gina Hausknecht	19
2 The aesthetics of divorce: "masculinism," idolatry, and poetic authority in Tetrachordon and Paradise Lost James Grantham Turner	34
3 Dalila, misogyny, and Milton's Christian liberty of divorce Catherine Gimelli Martin	53
PART II THE GENDERED SUBJECTS OF MILTON'S MAJOR POEMS
4 The profession of virginity in A Maske Presented at Ludlow Castle William Shullenberger	77
5 The genders of God and the redemption of the flesh in Paradise Lost Marshall Grossman	95

vi	Contents
6	Transported touch: the fruit of marriage in Paradise Lost John Rogers	115
7	The experience of defeat: Milton and some female contemporaries Elizabeth M. Sauer	133
8	Samson and surrogacy Amy Boesky	153
9	“I was his nursling once”: nation, lactation, and the Hebraic in Samson Agonistes Rachel Trubowitz	167
10	“The Jewish Question” and “The Woman Question” in Samson Agonistes : gender, religion, and nation Achsah Guibbory	184
PART III GENDERED SUBJECTIVITY IN MILTON’S LITERARY HISTORY
11	George Eliot as a “Miltonist”: marriage and Milton in Middlemarch Dayton Haskin	207
12	Saying it with flowers: Jane Giraud’s ecofeminist Paradise Lost (1846) Wendy Furman-Adams and Virginia James Tufte	223
13	Woolf’s allusion to Comus in The Voyage Out Lisa Low	254
	Index	271