

Contents

Preface to the Second English Edition	xiii
Contributors	xv
1 Motivation and Action: Introduction and Overview	1
J. Heckhausen and H. Heckhausen
1.1 Universal Characteristics of Human Action	1
1.1.1 Control Striving	2
1.1.2 Goal Engagement and Goal Disengagement	2
1.2 Motivation as a Product of Person and Situation	3
1.2.1 Person Factors: Needs and Implicit and Explicit Motives	3
1.2.2 Situation Factors: Intrinsic and Extrinsic Incentives	4
1.2.3 The Interaction of Person and Situation: Subjective Patterns of Incentives	5
1.3 Motivational and Volitional Action Control	6
1.4 Development of Motivation and Motivation of Development: The Dynamic Interaction of Person and Situation Across the Lifespan	8
2 Historical Trends in Motivation Research	10
H. Heckhausen
2.1 Introduction	10
2.2 The Generation of Pioneers	11
2.3 The Psychology of the Will	13
2.4 The Instinct Theory Approach	17
2.5 Personality Theories	20
2.5.1 The Motivation Psychology Approach	22
2.5.2 The Cognitive Psychology Approach	25
2.5.3 The Personality Psychology Approach	27
2.6 Associationist Theories	29
2.6.1 The Learning Psychology Approach	29
2.6.2 The Activation Psychology Approach	33
3 Trait Theories of Motivation	42
D. Scheffer and H. Heckhausen
3.1 From the Nomothetic to the Idiographic	42
3.1.1 Key Issues in Trait Theories of Motivation	42
3.1.2 Definition of a Trait	43
3.2 The Lexical Approach or the “Wisdom of Language”	44
3.2.1 The Five-Factor Model (Big Five)	44
3.2.2 R. B. Cattell’s Trait Theory	48
3.3 Motives as an Expression of Needs	50
3.3.1 Instinct-Based Classification of Motives	51
3.3.2 Person-Environment Relationships	52
3.3.3 Maslow’s Hierarchical Model of Motive Classification	55
3.4 Basic Emotions as a Rudimentary Motivation System	57
3.4.1 The Basic Emotions	58
3.4.2 The Adaptive Value of Emotions	59
3.4.3 Personality Traits as “Congealed” Emotions	60
3.5 Systems Theory Models of Motivation	61
3.5.1 The Zürich Model of Social Motivation	61
3.5.2 Kuhl’s Personality Systems Interaction Theory	63
3.6 Carver and Scheier’s Model of Dynamic Self-Regulation	65
3.7 Allport’s Idiographic Approach	67
4 Situational Determinants of Behavior	71
J. Beckmann and H. Heckhausen
4.1 The Explanatory Role of the Situation in Motivational Psychology	72
4.2 Need and Drive	72
4.3 Drive Theory	74
4.3.1 Antecedent Conditions of Drive	75
4.3.2 Drive Stimuli	76
4.3.3 Independence of Drive and Habit	76
4.3.4 Energizing Effects of Drive	77
4.3.5 Reinforcement Effects of Drive Reduction	77
4.3.6 The General Nature of Drive	78
4.3.7 Extensions of Drive Theory	79
4.4 Neo-Associationism	81
4.5 Conflict Theory	82
4.5.1 Lewin’s Conflict Theory	82
4.5.2 Miller’s Model of Conflict	84
4.5.3 Applications of the Conflict Model	85

- 4.6 Activation Theories 87
- 4.6.1 The Construct of Arousal 87
  - 4.6.2 Arousal Potential and Its Effects 88
- 4.7 Cognitive Appraisal Theories 90
- 4.7.1 Emotion as an Outcome of a Cognitive Appraisal 90
  - 4.7.2 Emotion-Triggering Situations 91
  - 4.7.3 Appraisal of Threatening Situations 91
  - 4.7.4 Cognitive Dissonance 93
- 4.8 Cognitive Appraisal Theories and Motivational Psychology 98
- 5 Motivation as a Function of Expectancy and Incentive 101
 J. Beckmann and H. Heckhausen
- 5.1 The Emergence of Incentives as Explanatory Concepts 101
  - 5.2 Situational Parameters of Motivation 102
    - 5.2.1 The Incentive Concept 102
    - 5.2.2 The Expectancy Concept 103
  - 5.3 Linking Incentive and Expectancy 103
  - 5.4 Lewin's Field Theory 103
    - 5.4.1 Tolman's Analysis of Goal-Directed Behavior 113
    - 5.4.2 Hull's Learning Theory Conception of Motivation 116
    - 5.4.3 More Recent Developments 118
  - 5.5 Expectancy-Value Theories 122
  - 5.6 Decision Theory 123
  - 5.7 Level of Aspiration and the Theory of Resultant Valence 125
    - 5.7.1 Success Expectancy and Valence 126
  - 5.8 Atkinson's Risk-Taking Model 127
  - 5.9 Rotter's Social Learning Theory 130
  - 5.10 Instrumentality Theory 131
    - 5.10.1 Vroom's Instrumentality Model 133
    - 5.10.2 The Three-Component Model of Valence, Action, and Performance 134
- 6 Achievement Motivation 139
 J. C. Brunstein and H. Heckhausen
- 6.1 Evolutionary and Ontogenetic Perspectives 140
  - 6.2 Motive Measurement 141
    - 6.2.1 The Thematic Apperception Test (TAT) 141
    - 6.2.2 TAT Measurements of the Achievement Motive 142
    - 6.2.3 Success and Failure Motives 144
    - 6.2.4 TAT Measurements of Hope and Fear 145
    - 6.2.5 Psychometric Properties of the TAT 146
    - 6.2.6 The Consistency Problem from the Perspective of Measurement and Construct Validity 148
    - 6.2.7 Other Techniques for Measuring Achievement-Related Motives 148
  - 6.2.8 Anatomy, Mechanisms, and Measurement of the Achievement Motive 151
- 6.3 The Achievement Motive and Behavior 152
- 6.3.1 The Achievement Motive and Individual Performance 152
  - 6.3.2 The Achievement Motive and Historical and Economic Change 154
- 6.4 The Risk-Taking Model as the Dominant Research Paradigm 156
- 6.4.1 Motive-Dependent Valence Gradients 157
  - 6.4.2 Choice: Product of Incentive and Expectancy 160
  - 6.4.3 Persistence 165
  - 6.4.4 Performance Outcomes 167
- 6.5 Achievement Motivation and Self-Evaluation 175
- 6.5.1 Achievement Motivation as a Self-Reinforcing System 175
  - 6.5.2 The Role of Reference Norms in the Motivation Process 178
  - 6.5.3 Reference-Norm Orientation and Achievement Motivation 179
- 6.6 The Importance of Achievement Motivation Research for Motivation and Learning 183
- 7 Social Bonding: Affiliation Motivation and Intimacy Motivation 186
 K. Sokolowski and H. Heckhausen
- 7.1 The Development of Social Bonds 186
    - 7.1.1 The Phylogeny of Social Bonding 187
    - 7.1.2 The Ontogenesis of Social Bonding 187
  - 7.2 Affiliation Motivation 188
  - 7.3 The Two Sides of the Affiliation Motive – Hope and Fear 191
    - 7.3.1 Hope of Affiliation 191
    - 7.3.2 Fear of Rejection 192
    - 7.3.3 Conflicts Between Hope and Fear in Affiliative Situations 193
  - 7.4 Measuring the Affiliation Motive and Its Behavioral Correlates 194
    - 7.4.1 The Thematic Apperception Test (TAT) 194
    - 7.4.2 Questionnaire Measures 197
    - 7.4.3 The Grid Technique 198
  - 7.5 Intimacy Motivation 200
    - 7.5.1 Measuring the Intimacy Motive 200
    - 7.5.2 The Intimacy Motive and Memory 201
  - 7.6 Physiological and Neuroimmunological Correlates 201
- 8 Power Motivation 205
 H.-D. Schmalt and H. Heckhausen
- 8.1 Power: Concepts and Constructs 205
    - 8.1.1 Power and Power Motivation 206

- 8.1.2 Sources of Power 208
- 8.1.3 Forms and Goals of Power Behavior 210
- 8.1.4 Approach and Avoidance in Power Motivation 212
- 8.1.5 Connecting Expectancy and Value 213
- 8.1.6 Developmental Stages of Power 214
- 8.1.7 Power and Dominance in Evolution 215
- 8.2 Measuring the Power Motive 216
  - 8.2.1 The TAT Method 216
  - 8.2.2 The Grid Technique 220
- 8.3 The Neurobiology of the Power Motive 222
  - 8.3.1 Endocrinological Factors 222
  - 8.3.2 Psychoimmunological Factors 223
- 8.4 An Influential Trio: The Power, Achievement, and Affiliation Motives 224
  - 8.4.1 Experimental Studies in Game Settings 224
  - 8.4.2 Economic Perspectives 225
  - 8.4.3 Political Perspectives 226
  - 8.4.4 War and Peace 227
- 9 Implicit and Explicit Motives 230
 J. C. Brunstein
  - 9.1 Theoretical Concepts and Background 230
  - 9.2 Evidence for the Independence of Implicit and Explicit Motives 232
    - 9.2.1 Zero Correlations Between Direct and Indirect Measures of Motives 232
    - 9.2.2 Behavioral Correlates of Implicit and Explicit Motives 234
    - 9.2.3 Motive-Arousing Incentives 236
    - 9.2.4 Differences in Child-Rearing Practices and Development 237
  - 9.3 Cognitive and Affective Needs 240
  - 9.4 The Interaction of Implicit and Explicit Motives 242
    - 9.4.1 Coalitions 242
    - 9.4.2 Conflicts 243
    - 9.4.3 Harmonization of Implicit and Explicit Motives 245
  - 9.5 Theoretical and Practical Implications of the Concept of Dual Motives 247
- 10 Biopsychological Aspects of Motivation 250
 O. C. Schultheiss and M. M. Wirth
  - 10.1 A Primer on Biopsychology and Its Methods 250
  - 10.2 Hallmarks of Motivation 251
    - 10.2.1 Motivated Behavior Comes in Two Basic Flavors: Approach and Avoidance Motivation 251
    - 10.2.2 Motivation Consists of Two Distinct Phases 252
    - 10.2.3 Many Qualitatively Different Types of Rewards Can Stimulate Motivation 252
    - 10.2.4 Motivation Is Dynamic 253
    - 10.2.5 Motivation Can Be Need Driven, Incentive Driven, or Both 253
    - 10.2.6 Motivation Is Characterized by Flexibility of Cue-Reward and Means-End Relationships 254
    - 10.2.7 Motivation Has Conscious and Nonconscious Aspects 254
  - 10.3 Brain Structures Generally Involved in Motivation 255
    - 10.3.1 Amygdala: Recognizing Rewards and Punishments at a Distance 255
    - 10.3.2 The Mesolimbic Dopamine System: Scaling the “Magnetic” Pull of Incentives 257
    - 10.3.3 The Orbitofrontal Cortex: Evaluating Rewards and Punishments 258
    - 10.3.4 The Lateral Prefrontal Cortex: Motivational Regulation and Override 262
  - 10.4 Specific Motivational Systems 263
    - 10.4.1 Feeding 263
    - 10.4.2 Affiliation and Attachment 266
    - 10.4.3 Dominance 268
    - 10.4.4 Sex 270
  - 10.5 Conclusion 272
- 11 Motivation and Volition in the Course of Action 275
 A. Achtziger and P. M. Gollwitzer
  - 11.1 Characteristics of the Action Perspective 275
  - 11.2 The Rubicon Model of Action Phases 276
    - 11.2.1 Action Phases 276
    - 11.2.2 Motivational vs. Volitional Action Phases 279
  - 11.3 Action Phases and Mindsets: How Can Psychological Processes Be Incorporated in an Idealized, Structural Model? 279
  - 11.4 Contrasting Effects of Deliberative and Implemental Mindsets 281
    - 11.4.1 Cognitive Tuning Toward Task-Congruent Information 282
    - 11.4.2 Processing of Relevant and Irrelevant Information 282
    - 11.4.3 Biased Processing of Information Relating to Goal Feasibility and Desirability 283
    - 11.4.4 Mindsets and Self-Evaluation 284
    - 11.4.5 Moderator Effects in the Deliberative and Implemental Mindsets 284
    - 11.4.6 Mindsets and Goal Achievement 285
    - 11.4.7 Concluding Discussion: Mindsets and Self-Regulation of Goal Striving 285
  - 11.5 Different Kinds of Intentions: Goal Intentions and Implementation Intentions 286
    - 11.5.1 How Do Implementation Intentions Work? 287

- 11.5.2 Implementation Intentions and the Initiation of Wanted Behavior 290
- 11.6 Implementation Intentions and the Control of Unwanted Behavior 291
- 11.6.1 Suppression-Oriented Implementation Intentions 291
- 11.6.2 Blocking Detrimental Self-States by Planning Wanted Behavior 292
- 11.6.3 Blocking Adverse Contextual Influences by Planning Wanted Behavior 293
- 11.7 Potential Costs of Implementation Intentions 295
- 11.7.1 Implementation Intentions and Behavioral Rigidity 295
- 11.7.2 Implementation Intentions and Ego Depletion 296
- 11.7.3 Implementation Intentions and Rebound Effects 296
- 11.8 Discussion and Future Perspectives 297
- 11.8.1 Implementation Intentions: A Foolproof Self-Regulatory Strategy? 297
- 11.8.2 Cognitive Aspects and Neuronal Substrates 297
- 12 Individual Differences in Self-Regulation 300
- J. Kuhl
- 12.1 Reflections on the Neglect of Individual Differences in Psychological Research 300
- 12.2 Motives as Need-Oriented Self-Regulatory Systems 301
- 12.2.1 Needs: Subaffective Detectors of Discrepancies Between Actual and Desired States 302
- 12.2.2 Affective and Cognitive Systems: Need-Relevant System Configurations 302
- 12.2.3 Implicit Motives: Intelligent Needs Serving the Context-Sensitive Regulation of Behavior 304
- 12.3 Will Without Homunculus: Decomposing Global Concepts of Will 308
- 12.3.1 Internal Dictatorship vs. Democracy: Self-Control and Self-Regulation 310
- 12.3.2 Progression vs. Regression: Stress-Related Volitional Inhibition and Inhibition of the Self 312
- 12.4 Affect-Regulatory Competencies: Action vs. State Orientation 313
- 12.4.1 The Core of the Construct: Self-Regulation of Affect 313
- 12.4.2 Effects of Action and State Orientation 316
- 12.5 PSI Theory: Affect-Modulated Interactions of Systems Relevant to Personality 320
- 12.5.1 Psychological Macrosystems 320
- 12.5.2 The First Modulation Assumption: Volitional Facilitation 321
- 12.5.3 The Second Modulation Assumption: Self-Access and Self-Development 323
- 12.6 Development: Determinants of Action and State Orientation 324
- 13 Intrinsic Motivation and Flow 329
- F. Rheinberg
- 13.1 Introduction 329
- 13.2 Defining “Intrinsic Motivation”: In Pursuit of a Phantom 331
- 13.2.1 The Problem 331
- 13.2.2 Intrinsic in the Sense of “in the Activity” 331
- 13.2.3 Intrinsic Motivation as the Need for Self-Determination and Competence 332
- 13.2.4 Intrinsic Motivation as Interest and Involvement 333
- 13.2.5 Intrinsic in the Sense of a Correspondence Between Means and Ends 334
- 13.2.6 Goal Orientation and Intrinsic Motivation 335
- 13.2.7 So What Exactly Is Intrinsic Motivation? 336
- 13.2.8 The Undermining Effect of External Rewards: Myth or Reality? 336
- 13.2.9 Terminological Implications 337
- 13.3 Purpose- and Activity-Related Incentives in the Extended Cognitive Model of Motivation 338
- 13.3.1 The Purpose-Oriented Model of Rational Behavior 338
- 13.3.2 The Role of Activity-Related Incentives 339
- 13.4 Qualitative Analyses of Activity-Related Incentives 340
- 13.4.1 Standardized Assessment of Quality of Experience 340
- 13.4.2 Assessing Activity-Specific Incentives 341
- 13.4.3 The Activity-Related Incentive of Achievement Motivation 342
- 13.5 Flow: Joyful Absorption in an Activity 343
- 13.5.1 The Phenomenon 343
- 13.5.2 Qualitative Flow Research 344
- 13.5.3 Quantitative Flow Research 345
- 13.5.4 A Revision of the Model 346
- 13.5.5 The Expertise Effect and Resistance to the Undermining of Intrinsic Motivation 347
- 13.5.6 Flow and Achievement 348
- 13.6 Future Prospects: The Flow Hypothesis of Motivational Competence 349
- 14 Causal Attribution of Behavior and Achievement 355
- J. Stiensmeier-Pelster and H. Heckhausen
- 14.1 Causal Attribution: How Thinking About Causes Influences Behavior 355

14.2 Weiner's Attributional Analysis of Motivation, Emotion, and Behavior	356	15.5 Parent-Child Interaction: The Cradle of Action	401
14.3 Attribution Theories	359	15.6 Developmental Preconditions of Achievement-Motivated Behavior	403
14.3.1 Basic Assumptions	359	15.6.1 Distinguishing Between Degrees of Task Difficulty and Personal Competence	403
14.3.2 Causal Search: Triggering Conditions, Duration, and Intensity	360	15.6.2 Distinguishing Causal Conceptions of Ability and Effort	404
14.3.3 Processes of Causal Attribution: Normative Models	365	15.6.3 Cognitive Preconditions for Setting Levels of Aspiration	406
14.3.4 Processes of Causal Attribution: Descriptive Perspectives	376	15.6.4 Causal Schemata for Ability and Effort	410
14.4 Attributional Theories	380	15.7 Development of Individual Differences in Motive Strength and Action Regulation Systems	414
14.4.1 Attribution and Changes in Expectancy	381	15.7.1 Implicit Motives	414
14.4.2 Attributional Analysis of Hopelessness Depression	383	15.7.2 Specific Incentives and Expectancies	415
14.4.3 Attributional Analysis of Aggressive Behavior	386	15.7.3 Generalized Goal Orientations	418
15 Motivation and Development	391	15.7.4 Regulation of Motivation and Action	420
J. Heckhausen and H. Heckhausen		15.7.5 Differential Developmental Pathways: Critical Phases, Life-Course Transitions, and Universal Developmental Milestones	422
15.1 Development of Control Striving Across the Lifespan: A Fundamental Phenomenon of Motivational Development	391	15.8 The Motivation of Developmental Regulation	430
15.2 Early Control Striving	393	15.8.1 The Life Course as a Field of Action	430
15.3 Focusing on the Intended Outcome of an Action	394	15.8.2 The Action-Phase Model of Developmental Regulation	434
15.4 Establishment of Personal Competence as an Action Incentive	395	15.8.3 Individual Differences in the Capacity for Developmental Regulation	445
15.4.1 Pride and Shame – Emotions Between Achievement and Power	396	15.8.4 Motivated Development: Dynamic Interaction Between Development and Motivation Across the Lifespan	446
15.4.2 Risks of Self-Evaluative Responses	398	References	451
15.4.3 Strategies to Counteract or Avoid Negative Self-Evaluation	399	Index	511