From 1550 to 1850, the Araucanian polity in southern Chile was a center of political resistance to the intruding Spanish empire. In this book, Tom D. Dillehay examines the resistance strategies of the Araucanians and how they incorporated Andean knowledge and used mounds and other sacred monuments to reorganize their political and cultural life in order to unite against the Spanish. Drawing on anthropological research conducted over three decades, Dillehay focuses on the development of leadership, shamanism, ritual landscapes, and power relations, and on how healing ceremonies performed at actively used mounds today give meaning to the past and reveal the social and cosmological principles by which the Araucanians have organized their society. His study combines recent developments in social theory with the archaeological, ethnographic, and historical records. Both theoretically and empirically informed, this book is a fascinating account of an indigenous ethnic group that successfully resisted outsiders for more than three centuries and flourished under these conditions.

Monuments, Empires, and Resistance is an indispensable text for all archaeologists interested in the social, ideological, and demographic processes that construct and maintain mound building and mound worship in the past. This book details for the first time ethnographic ritual narratives that reveal the kin relations between mounds and living shamans. Dillehay illuminates these complex processes and the changing consciousness of the people who built and live with the mounds.

Tom D. Dillehay is Distinguished Professor and Chair of Anthropology at Vanderbilt University. He has conducted extensive anthropological research in Peru, Chile, and the United States. He has published extensively in both English and Spanish. He is the author of several books, including The Settlement of the Americas: A New Prehistory, and the editor of Tombs for Living: Andean Mortuary Practices and has been a visiting professor at more than fifteen universities worldwide.
Cambridge Studies in Archaeology

Cambridge Studies in Archaeology aims to showcase the very best in contemporary archaeological scholarship. Reflecting the wide diversity and vigour of archaeology as an intellectual discipline, the series covers all regions of the world and embraces all major theoretical and methodological approaches. Designed to be empirically grounded and theoretically aware, and including both single-authored and collaborative volumes, the series is arranged around four highlighted strands:

- Prehistory
- Classical Archaeology
- Medieval Archaeology
- Historical Archaeology

Titles in series

The Archaeology of Class in Urban America
Stephen A. Mrozowski

Archaeology, Society, and Identity in Modern Japan
Koji Mizoguchi

Death and Memory in Early Medieval Britain
Howard Williams
DEDICATED TO THE LATE AMÉRICO GORDON STECKEL
CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Figures</th>
<th>page xiii</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Preface</td>
<td>xvii</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

INTRODUCTION

1. Thematic Organization of the Book

PART ONE: PROSPECTS AND PATTERNS

ONE: PURPOSES, SETTINGS, AND DEFINITIONS

15. Setting the Historical Background: Fifteenth to Seventeenth Centuries
24. Scholarly Research

   - The Archaeology of Mound Building
   - Ethnohistory and the Araucanian Estado
   - Ethnography and Sacred Geographies
28. Uniting the Archaeological and Textual Past and the Ethnographic Present
30. The Utopic Polity
45. Epilogue

TWO: SHAPING ANALOGICAL AND CONCEPTUAL PERSPECTIVES

53. Analogical Reasoning

   - Concepts Useful to Understanding the Araucanian Case
66. Approaches to Space, Place, and Landscape
75. Ritual Healing Narratives and Recollective Memories
80. Conclusion
CONTENTS

THREE: ARAUCANIAN PREHISTORY AND HISTORY: OLD BIASES AND NEW VIEWS

81
Previous Ideas about Araucanian History and Identity

Archaeological Voices

First Mound Encounters

Archaeological Evidence for the Origins of Araucanian Culture

Becoming Andean: Andean, Inka, and Araucanian Interaction

Ethnohistorical Voice

Political and Demographic Configurations

Linking Kuel Archaeology, Ethnohistory, and Ethnography

Conclusions

FOUR: IMBRICATING SOCIAL, MATERIAL, METAPHORICAL, AND SPIRITUAL WORLDS

153
Ancestral Knowledge and Tradition

Space and Religion as Knowledge

Illness, Death, and Therapeutic Places

Ancestors and Deities

Conjunction of Ethereal and Physical Spaces

Machi Shamans: Mediators of Ancestral Knowledge and Healing Experience

Concepts of Time, Space, Creation Narratives, and Knowledge

The Ceremonial Meeting of Wenumapi and Nag Mapu Worlds

Awün (Awn)

Winkulkueltn and Kueltn

Nquillatun

The Cherquenco Nquillatun

Internal Layout and Activity Structure of Nquillatun Space

Spatiality of Ritual Intercessors: Nquillatufe and Machi

Iconographic Symbols of Ritual Spaces

Natural Symbolism and Ecological Trophic Order

Continuity from Past to Present in Rehue, Kuel, Rehuekuel, and Nquillatun Fields

Andean Continuity in Ceremonial Space as Embedded in the Trophic Socio-spatial Order

Communities and Conclusions

FIVE: THE ETHNOGRAPHIES OF KUEL, NARRATIVES, AND COMMUNITIES

216
With José Saavedra

Ethnographic Teachings

Naming and Knowing Kuel
CONTENTS

Kuel Functions

- The Priestly Shaman or Machi and the Kuel: Exchanging Identities and Transposing Histories 229
- The Hualonkokuel Llamatun and Lonkotun Rituals 234
- Tren Trenkuel Narrative 244
- Postceremony Conversations with Machi Juanita and Lucinda 257
- Ethnographic Descriptions by Other Informants 261
- Analytical Meaning and Perspective 267
- Kuel, Machi, and the Spirit World 270
- Knowledge, Kuel, and Mound Literacy or Nauchi 272

SIX: AN ARCHAEOLOGICAL VIEW OF KUEL AND REHUEKUEL

- General Archaeological Objectives, Methods, and Findings to Date 276
  - Kuel and Rehuekuel 279
  - Domestic Sites 300
- Agricultural Canals and Raised Fields 302
- Fortresses 303
- Population Estimates 304
- Settlement and Other Patterns 306
- Summary and Discussion 311
- Analytical Perspectives on Araucanian Monumentalism 318
  - History, Landscape, and Meaning 320
  - Volcanoes, Mountains, Mounds, Nodalities, and Topographic Pathways 321
  - Bounded and Holistic Monumentalism 325
  - Analytical Classification of Araucanian Monuments 327
- Discussion 329

PART TWO: ANALYSIS AND INTERPRETATION

SEVEN: CONTACT, FRAGMENTATION, AND RECRUITMENT AND THE REHUEKUEL 335

- Indigenous Political and Religious Structures: Leaders and Venues 337
- Power Venues and Leadership Action 345
- Political Effects of Population Fragmentation: Recruitment and Annexation 354
- Lasting Outcomes of Recruitment and Adoption: Compatriotism, Political Unity, and Ritual Feasting 360
- Reflections 364
- Epilogue 368

EIGHT: RECURSIVENESS, KINSHIP GEOGRAPHIES, AND POLITY 370

- Becoming Andean and Inka 373
- Spatializing Gatherings at and between Rehuekuel for Ayllarehue 375
Contents

Nauchi: Mound Literacy and the Social Working of Rehuekuel 381

Identities, Compatriots, and Ayllarehue 386

Memory and Perpetuity 391

Back to the Future: The Confederated Utopic Locality – a Heterotopic Entity 394

Nine: Epilogue 398

A Wide-Angle View of Mounds 402

Effective Recursiveness 406

Timelessness of Mapuche Landscapes 408

Appendix One: Ethnographic Ritual Narratives at Hualonkokuel and Trentrenkuel 411

Appendix Two: Radiocarbon Dates and Thermoluminescence Dates 465

References Cited 469

Index 481
View of the Rehuëñichikuel mound in Butarincón surrounded by a nguillatun ceremonial field.
Tren Trenkuel and ſich platform in Isla de Katrileo and Butarincón.
Schematic representation of the Araucanian’s terms for rehuekuel.
Map showing the study area south of the Bio Bio River.
Areas controlled by the Inka state and culturally influenced by Araucanian polity.
Map of the sixteenth-century extent of the Araucanian polity and their later influence on locations of indigenous groups in Argentina.
Geographical distribution of isolated and clustered mound cultures in the Araucania.
View of the Maicoyakuel with ſich platform in the Purén Valley.
Nguillatun field at Hualonkokuel including the shaman’s rehue pole and the “sick” mound that needed curing.
Aerial view of the Rehuëñichikuel showing the ſich platform, rehuckuel, and borrow pits.
Informal and formal frontiers of the Inka state in south-central Chile.
Polychrome ceramics types showing probable Inka influence.
a. Location of the sacred Wenucola mountain; b. closeup of Wenucola.
The “usman” located on the summit of Wenucola.
Stone-walled terraces at Wenucola.
A sacred rehue pole with a sheepskin draped across the top.
Location of the estado and the study area.
The impenetrable wetlands or ciéneas of Purén in the winter.
A hillcrest mound and associated habitation site in the Purén Valley.
A nineteenth-century cemetery site showing chemamull and a machi.
Unnamed kuel and rehuckuel near Pucón. Used today for nguillatum ceremonies based on its kufilkuel.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Figure</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>22</td>
<td>Plan of the Nachekuel nguillatun field in Rucalleco showing logistical applications of the land, people, and trash allocation.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23</td>
<td>Thatched ruka house in Lumaco.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24</td>
<td>Schematic of the Araucanian upper and lower cosmological world.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td>Schematic of the cardinal directions of the cosmological world and the movements of dance and ritual during the nguillatun.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>Schematic of the cardinal directions of the internal and external space within and around kuel mound.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>27</td>
<td>Wooden chemamull ancestral statues near Pircunche.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>View of the flattened used area and trail passages on top of the TrenTrenkuel mound in Butarincón.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>29</td>
<td>View of the KaiKai hill and its series of small mounds.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>30</td>
<td>Nguillatun ceremony near Lumaco in 1981.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31</td>
<td>Schematic representation of the nguillatun field.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>32</td>
<td>Nachekuel mound showing the spiraling footpath used by shamans during ceremony.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>33</td>
<td>Individual ruca and family seating places in the nguillatun field.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>34</td>
<td>View of a rehue pole in the central plaza of a nguillatun field.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>35</td>
<td>Spatial layout of the nguillatun field near Cherquenco.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>36</td>
<td>View of a rehue pole in a nguillatun field.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>37</td>
<td>Faces, representing male and female ancestral figures, are painted on a rehue chemamull near Cherquenco, Malleco.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>38</td>
<td>Stepped diamond design motif on the ponchos of secular lonko leaders.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>39</td>
<td>Schematic representation of cardinal directions on the kultrun.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>40</td>
<td>Machi playing the kultrun prior to climbing the rehue pole.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>41</td>
<td>Schematic of the settlement and seating pattern of families and lineages in the nguillatun field.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>42</td>
<td>View of Rehueñichikuel in 1984 showing forest cover cut back.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>43</td>
<td>The Chavin Tello Obelisk modified from Rowe (1967).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>44</td>
<td>Mapuche stone implement with snake and other reptile motifs.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>45</td>
<td>General view of Hualonkokuel and the nguillatun in its plaza.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>46</td>
<td>General view of TrenTrenkuel and its nichi platform.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>47</td>
<td>Map and location of the named kuel in this chapter. These mounds are referred to as offspring of TrenTrenkuel.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>48</td>
<td>Profile of the north excavated wall of TrenTrenkuel showing the burned floor and blue clay floor.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>49</td>
<td>General location map of various sites in Purén and Lumaco Valley.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>50</td>
<td>The majority of large mound complexes are located in Butarincón.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>51</td>
<td>Aerial view of Maicyokuel, accompanying mounds, plaza, and nearby domestic sites.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
List of Figures

52  Aerial view of Nachekuel and nguillatun field.  285
53  Topographical and three-dimensional view of Nachekuel and its ḳichī platform.  286
54  Topographical and three-dimensional maps of TrenTrenkuel.  287
55  Ritual sight lines from Wenucolla to Andean volcanoes where the deity Pillan resides.  288
56  General view from Huitranlehue and the sacred lagoon to TrenTrenkuel.  289
57  Topographical and three-dimensional maps of Huitranlebukuel.  290
58  General view of Rapahuekuel, Mound A.  291
59  Topographic and three-dimensional maps of Rapahuekuel.  292
60  Topographic and three-dimensional maps of Kuifilkuel.  293
61  Topographical and three-dimensional maps of Maicoyakuel.  294
62  View of Lolonkokuel.  295
63  Topographic and three-dimensional maps of Lolonkokuel.  296
64  Topographical and three-dimensional maps of Scheelkuel.  297
65  Topographical and three-dimensional maps of Hualonkokuel.  299
66  Excavated ovens outside of a ruca house in PV-165.  301
67  View of a late pre-Hispanic to early Hispanic canal near Butarincón.  303
68  Channelized field and raised field near Butarincón.  304
69  Raised fields along the Pacific coast west of the Purén Valley.  305
70  Closeup of raised fields in backwater estuaries.  306
71  Deep moat associated with a hillside fortress near Rapahuekuel.  307
72  Schematic of the active topographic pathways and nguillatun directions across the valley.  319
73  View of volcanoes in the Andean mountains to the east, from which kuel are said to take their form.  322
75  Schematic representation of intermarrying lineages and ritual congregations in the 1950s (after Faron 1964:110).  341
Much of the data in this book come in the form of archaeological research, ethnohistorical documentation, and ethnographical recordings and observations. For more than thirty years, I have participated in many different ritual ceremonies and other events in many different Araucanian, or Mapuche, communities, always examining the living behavior from the perspective of their spatial, material, and symbolic correlates. The Mapuche are not partial to interviews and prefer a non-interventionist style of fieldwork where they offered information when they thought that my colleagues and I were ready to receive it or needed to be corrected. My language skills in Mapundungun are barely sufficient for understanding the conversation at hand during daily life but certainly not proficient to understand the often archaic intonations and nuances of shamanic speech and chant in ceremony. Most interviews and rituals were tape recorded when we were given permission. A native speaker, Maria Catrileo, translated the tapes from Mapundungun to Spanish. For much of the material, I assisted in the translation of many words and phrases, now having become somewhat proficient in the ritual language. The majority of the Spanish texts, especially those from the early chroniclers, were translated by Patricia Netherly. Others were translated by other colleagues and by me. Netherly also edited these translations in order to derive a similar style.

Although the research themes examined in these pages encompass several centuries and primarily one river valley, the impetus for this book comes from my experiences in almost all parts of the Araucanian territory. Much of this research was carried out in a time when a different Chile existed. Today, people arrive to ski on the high slopes of the Andes, to bathe in the hundreds of thermal baths flowing from the Andean foothills, and to enjoy good seafood and wine. I know and have a deep passion for this Chile. But there was another Chile, one engulfed in political turmoil and ruled by the Pinochet dictatorship (see Ensalaco 2000) when I began my studies in early 1975. It was a time of toque de queda (curfew) when the side of the street you walked on identified the side of political life you affiliated with and when people disappeared and were never heard from again.
During these years in the mid to late 1970s, I was writing my dissertation and teaching first at the Pontificia Universidad Católica de Temuco and later at the Universidad Austral de Chile. I still am a professor at the latter institution.

In the late 1970s and throughout the 1980s during the Pinochet regime, I occasionally witnessed unpleasant conflicts between the military and some Mapuche communities over land and resources. I have commented both privately and publicly about some of these experiences. In addition to stories and tales about mounds and other themes of historical and archaeological interest, informants told me about desaparecidos and armed conflicts. Therefore, I have not listed all informants I worked with over the past three decades in accordance with their wishes, in order to protect those who confided in me during the years of my research and to prevent the use of informant knowledge beyond the anthropological community.

This book has benefited from its long gestation. Parts of it were begun in the mid-1990s, initially supported by the Banco Interamericano de Desarrollo, Fulbright Commission, National Geographic Society, Pontificia Universidad Católica de Temuco, and Universidad Austral de Chile; later by the Heinz Foundation, John Simon Memorial Guggenheim Foundation, Vanderbilt University, and National Science Foundation; and always by the University of Kentucky. I would like to thank numerous colleagues over the years for their help as sounding boards and valuable sources of information: José Saavedra, Patricio Sanzana, Arturo Rojas, Gaston Sepulveda, Mario Pino, Teresa Durán, Leonor Adan, Rolf Foerster, Carlos Ocampo, Ana Mariella Bacigalupo, Hans Gundermann, René San Martin, Ximena Navarro, Alejandro Saavedra, Maria Ester Grebe, José Manuel Zavala, Raúl Ortiz, Gerson Levy, Tim Earle, Ian Hodder, Richard Bradley, David Pollack, Gwynn Henderson, William Adams, and Kenneth Hirth. Special gratitude is given to the late Alberto Medina, an ethnohistorian and professor at the Universidad de Chile and to the late Américo Gordon, who was a good archaeologist, a connoisseur of Mapuche culture, and a dear friend. Américo and I spent many informative days together in the field and had many relaxed conversations in his home in Temuco. This book is dedicated to him.

There are countless people who have worked closely with me in the field since I first went to Chile: Mario Pino, José Saavedra, Patricio Sanzana, Gaston Sepulveda, Américo Gordon, Ximena Navarro, Arturo Rojas, and René San Martin. All of these colleagues are good friends. We have spent many enjoyable times in the field. Also included in this group are hundreds of Mapuche workers and informants from many different areas in south-central Chile and students from various universities worldwide. Comments on a draft of this manuscript by Patricia Netherly, José Bengoa, Norman Yoffee, José Manuel Zavala, and Gerardo Ardila helped me strengthen the final version. José Saavedra and Arturo Rojas provided comments on the ethnography chapters, and José Manuel Zavala read and reviewed the ethnohistory chapter. Ashley Colby Parrott and Paige Silcox.
provided excellent technical support. Special thanks also are extended to four anonymous readers for Cambridge University Press, who provided invaluable comments and suggestions. I also would like to thank Simon Whitmore and Beatrice Rehl at Cambridge University Press, for all of their help and encouragement. Thanks also are extended to Mary Paden and Lee A. Young for their editorial advice. A special gratitude is extended to José Saavedra who has spent more time in the field with me in Chile than anyone else listed here. José collected a substantial portion of the ethnographic data with me. He has been a loyal friend and colleague. I also thank my wife, Dana Nelson, for her invaluable support, advice, and companionship. Lastly, to thank the Mapuche seems somewhat lame, as without them this book could not have been written. Their patience, encouragement, influence, and friendship not only affected me while I lived in and have continued to carry out research in Chile but have taught me the importance of indigenous struggles and of questioning received anthropological wisdom.