

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-87582-0 - The Sheep of the Fold: The Audience and Origin of the Gospel of John

Edward W. Klink III

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	page x
List of abbreviations	xi
1 The audience and origin of the Gospels: introduction and method	1
Introduction	1
Problem to be addressed: its recent development	2
Historical survey: the quest for the Gospel community	10
Source criticism: the geographic origin of community	10
Form criticism: the tradition of the community	12
Redaction criticism: the creative depiction of the community	18
Social-scientific criticism: the articulation of the community	23
Conclusion	23
The fourth Gospel and “community”	24
Methodology	35
The fourth Gospel as a test case	37
The purpose of this study	40
2 Early Christian community: a study of the community construct and its functional potential in early Christianity	42
The quest for the early Christian “community”	42
Definition of the early Christian community: its variation and type	47
Models of “community” in the early Christian movement	48
Definition of Gospel “community”: a new proposal	51
Definition of community: conclusion	63
A community that is sectarian: John the sectarian document?	64
	vii

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-87582-0 - The Sheep of the Fold: The Audience and Origin of the Gospel of John

Edward W. Klink III

Table of Contents

More informationviii Contents

Early Christianity as sectarian	64
Antilanguage: John's sectarian audience and speech accommodation	74
Symbolic construct and antilanguage: the need for a new proposal	77
Conclusion: a community that is sectarian?	86
Patristic exegesis and the Gospels	87
Audience and origin of the Gospels: the evidence from patristics	88
The function of Gospel narrative traditions in patristic exegesis	96
Patristic exegesis and the endorsement of tradition	100
Conclusion: patristic exegesis and Gospel origins	104
Early Christian community: conclusion	105
3 Early Christian Gospel: Gospel genre and a critique of the two-level reading of the Gospel of John	107
Gospel genre and Gospel audience	108
John's two-level drama: a critique	115
Gospel genre and narrative referentiality	121
John 9:22: the entry point into the two-level reading	127
A "literal" reading of the Gospel narrative	147
Conclusion: early Christian Gospel	150
4 Early Christian reader: an explication of the audience of the fourth Gospel by inquiring for the implied reader	152
The quest of the implied reader: method and procedure in John	153
The search for the implied reader in the Gospel of John	157
Persons (characters)	157
Places	165
Languages	170
Judaism	172
Events	177
Conclusion: the implied, first-century reader of the Gospel of John	181
5 Reading the fourth Gospel: the function of the Gospel of John in light of the Gospel community debate	185
Introduction	185
Representative figures in the fourth Gospel	187
Nicodemus and John 3:1–36	191

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-87582-0 - The Sheep of the Fold: The Audience and Origin of the Gospel of John

Edward W. Klink III

Table of Contents

More information

Contents	ix
The Samaritan woman and John 4:4–42	196
The larger narrative function of representative figures	199
The contextual significance of the “expulsion from the synagogue” passages	203
The purpose of the fourth Gospel	213
Mission in the fourth Gospel	220
“Those who are sent”: a Christology of mission	225
The social-historical context of the mission motif	230
Conclusion	238
Early “Christian” relations in the fourth Gospel	238
Conclusion: reading the fourth Gospel	245
6 The sheep of the fold: summary and conclusion	247
Summary of results	249
Conclusion: the Gospel community debate and the fourth Gospel	250
Implications of this study for future research	252
Conclusion	255
Bibliography	257
Index	308