Index of Citations: Authors Cited in the Lives

All ancient writings cited in the Translation are listed here by author, including some who remain “Anonymous.” Only material ostensibly from an author’s writings is included; strictly oral remarks, even verbatim quotations, appear only when cited from a written work, and under the author’s name, not the speaker’s. Citations are normally flagged in the Translation by abbreviated references in square brackets, often by “F” for “fragments” or paraphrases. The collections and editions from which those references derive are indicated here following each author’s name. Citations from an author’s extant works appear first, then fragmentary material; citations found in different collections are listed on separate lines; and citations not found in the specified collections are listed last, separated by a semi-colon. The Index also lists the sources of fragmentary material for ancient authors cited only in the notes, but not citations found only there.

Index of Persons

This Index lists all personal names in the text, including occurrences in titles. Names are accompanied by homeland, dates, and affiliations where known. For persons with the same name, subjects of lives and rulers are listed first, then others by homeland where known, and the rest chronologically or according to their appearance in the text. Dates are BCE unless otherwise indicated; most are approximate, many only an estimated acme (typically around age forty) or century (in Roman numerals: capitals for BCE, lower case for CE). Entries in the Dictionnaire des philosophes antiques (Goulet 1989–2018) are cited where available, e.g. A12 for Acusilaus. Boldface numerals indicate a biography, or an extended quotation from the person's writings. Asterisks indicate mention in a title. For spelling and transliteration, see Introduction §3.
