

DEVELOPING CRITICAL CONSCIOUSNESS IN YOUTH

Critical consciousness is the ability to critically analyze societal inequities and to develop the motivation and agency to promote social change. While there has been a proliferation of empirical work on critical consciousness over the last two decades, this is the first volume to consider how we can support youth's critical consciousness development – their ability to recognize and fight injustice. Leading scholars address some of the field's most urgent questions: How does critical consciousness develop? What are the key developmental settings (homes, schools, community programs) and societal experiences (racism, police brutality, immigration, political turmoil) that inform critical consciousness development among youth? Providing novel insights into key school-based, out-of-school, and societal contexts that propel youth to greater critical reflection and action, this book will benefit scholars and students in developmental, educational, and community psychology, as well as practitioners working in schools, community-based organizations, and other youth settings.

Erin B. Godfrey is Associate Professor of Applied Psychology in the Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development at New York University. She is coeditor of Critical Consciousness: Expanding Theory and Measurement (2023) and an editorial board member for the Journal of Youth and Adolescence. She won NYU Steinhardt's W. Gabriel Carras Research Award in 2013 and NYU Steinhardt's Griffiths Research Award in 2018.

Luke J. Rapa is Assistant Professor in the Department of Education and Human Development at Clemson University, USA. He is coeditor of Critical Consciousness: Expanding Theory and Measurement (2023) and Disproportionality and Social Justice in Education (2022). He was Clemson University's College of Education Junior Researcher of the Year in 2022.

Contemporary Social Issues Series

General Editor: Brian D. Christens,
Vanderbilt University

Contemporary Social Issues is the official book series of the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues (SPSSI). Since its founding in 1936, SPSSI has addressed the social issues of the times. Central to these efforts has been the Lewinian tradition of action-oriented research, in which psychological theories and methods guide research and action addressed to important societal problems. Grounded in their authors' programmes of research, works in this series focus on social issues facing individuals, groups, communities, and/or society at large, with each volume written to speak to scholars, students, practitioners, and policymakers.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

A project like this cannot materialize without the contributions of so many people. We are grateful to all who supported this work – in big and small ways, and in seen and unseen ways.

To all who contributed chapters to this volume, thank you for engaging with us in this project and for trusting us with your ideas and your scholarship. Your contributions truly are the sine qua non of this work; without your commitment to participate in conversations, writing groups, idea exchanges, and peer review processes – not to mention doing the hard work of writing and revising your own chapters – this volume would not be what it is today. We are eternally grateful for your participation in this project and we are honored to be a part of a scholarly community with you, sharing in your intellectual, academic, and critically reflective spaces.

To colleagues who offered guidance, support, and encouragement along the way, thank you for your commitment to us and for your care about our work, our ideas, and our successes.

To our families, thank you for your love, encouragement, patience, and support. We are only able to do what we do because of you.

To Luke, I (Erin) cannot express how thankful I am – and how deeply lucky I feel – to have had the opportunity to join you in this undertaking. Our collaboration has been a light in dark times and one of the most rewarding and enriching projects in my career. Your passion, intellect, and perspective inspire me in my work and your friendship lifts me up in my life. Thank you for choosing me to go on this journey with you.

Dr. Brian Christens, we offer you our most sincere gratitude for your assistance and your guidance over the course of this project. We appreciate the trust and confidence you placed in us, and your willingness to allow us to engage in this work as we did. The volume would surely not be what it is today without your support of the vision we had for this book.

Janka Romero and Rowan Groat, at Cambridge University Press, thank you for your expert hands in guiding us through the process, from initial proposal development through manuscript completion. Your insights and care were invaluable to us, and this volume could not have come to fruition without you. Your patience and your speedy replies to our queries are greatly appreciated.

This project was funded in part by Clemson University's R-Initiative Program. We are grateful to the Clemson University Division of Research for the generous funding provided to support a portion of Luke's work on this volume. This project was also funded in part by NYU's University Research Challenge Fund and the NYU Steinhardt School of Culture, Education and Human Development Faculty Challenge Grant. We thank NYU and NYU Steinhardt for their generous support of this scholarship.

We dedicate this book to the young people everywhere, and to those who love, teach, support, guide, and learn with, from, and alongside them. Your activism, creativity, passion, and strength inspire us to try every day to make the world we live in worthy of you.
