

Contents

List of Contributors	page ix
Series Preface	xiv
Acknowledgements	xv
Introduction	I
Margaret Kelleher and James O'Sullivan
PART I GENEALOGIES
1 Print as Technology: The Case of the Irish Language, 1571–1850	11
Marc Caball
2 Printing and Publishing Technologies, 1700–1820	29
Máire Kennedy
3 The Optical Telegraph, the United Irish Press, and Maria Edgeworth's 'White Pigeon'	49
Joanna Wharton
4 Technologies of Sound: Telephone/Gramophone	65
Christopher Morash
PART II INFRASTRUCTURES
5 Electric Signs and Echo Chambers: The Stupidity of Affect in Modern Irish Literature	83
Barry Sheils
6 Literature and the Technologies of Radio and Television	99
Robert J. Savage
7 'The Re-Tuning of the World Itself': Irish Poetry on the Radio	118
Ian Whittington

viii	Contents
PART III INVENTION
8	Technology, Writing, and Place in Medieval Irish Literature Máire Ní Mhaonaigh	137
9	The Critique of Sola Scriptura in A Tale of a Tub and STEM in Gulliver's Travels Sean Moore	154
10	Technology and Irish Modernism Kathryn Conrad	168
11	W. B. Yeats, the Revival, and Scientific Invention Aoife Lynch	186
12	James Joyce, Irish Modernism, and Watch Technology Katherine Ebury	201
13	Technology, Terminology, and the Irish Language, Past and Present Sharon Arbuthnot	217
PART IV THE DIGITAL
14	Irish Literary Feminism and Its Digital Archive(s) Margaret Kelleher and Karen Wade	235
15	Consoling Machines in Contemporary Irish Fiction Claire Lynch	253
16	'At Me Too Someone Is Looking': Staging Surveillance in Irish Theatre Victor Merriman	267
17	Technology in Contemporary Irish Poetry: Data at 'the Edge of Language' Anne Karbio	284
18	Irish Digital Literature James O'Sullivan	308
	Index	327