

ILLUMINATING THE WORD IN THE EARLY MIDDLE AGES

This richly illustrated study addresses the essential first steps in the development of the new phenomenon of the illuminated book, which innovatively introduced colourful large letters and ornamental frames as guides for the reader's access to the text. Tracing their surprising origins within late Roman reading practices, Lawrence Nees shows how these decorative features stand as ancestors to features of printed and electronic books we take for granted today, including font choice, word spacing, punctuation, and sentence capitalization. Two hundred photographs, nearly all in color, illustrate and document the decisive change in design from ancient to medieval books. Featuring an extended discussion of the importance of race and ethnicity in twentieth-century historiography, this book argues that the first steps in the development of this new style of book were taken on the European continent within classical practices of reading and writing, and not, as is usually presented, among the non-Roman "barbarians."

Lawrence Nees is Professor of Medieval Art and H. Fletcher Brown Chair of the Humanities at the University of Delaware. He is the author of The Gundohinus Gospels; From Justinian to Charlemagne: European Art A.D. 565–787; A Tainted Mantle: Hercules and the Classical Tradition at the Carolingian Court; Early Medieval Art 300–1000; Perspectives on Early Islamic Art in Jerusalem; and Frankish Manuscripts: The Seventh to the Tenth Century; and edited Approaches to Early-Medieval Art. Professor Nees has received research fellowships from the Mellon Foundation, the American Council of Learned Societies, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Center for Advanced Study in the Visual Arts (National Gallery of Art, Washington), the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, the Guggenheim Foundation, the American Academy in Berlin, the National Humanities Center, and the J. This series has been established to further the study of manuscripts from the Middle Ages to the Renaissance. It includes books devoted to particular types of manuscripts, their production and circulation, to individual codices of outstanding importance, and to regions, periods, and scripts of especial interest to scholars. The series will be of interest not only to scholars and students of medieval literature and history, but also to theologians, art historians, and others working with manuscript sources.

Acknowledgments

The idea for this book began to grow when I first held in my hands the fascinating manuscript of Gregory's Homilies on Ezekiel, in the National Library of Russia in St. Petersburg. I had gone there to examine several manuscripts that I was considering for inclusion in a planned volume on Frankish manuscripts from the seventh to the tenth century, eventually published in 2022. I am deeply grateful to the staff of the National Library of Russia, who made it possible to study the manuscript, the extraordinarily rich decoration of which surprised and moved me as few others have done. Many other curators at other libraries also permitted me to examine their precious early manuscripts, the most important being at the Bibliothèque nationale de France, where François Avril, Marie-Pierre Laffitte, and Charlotte Denoël were extraordinarily generous and helpful. I am also deeply grateful to the many other librarians across Europe and North America.

I am grateful to the University of Delaware's Department of Art History, especially to Derek Churchill and Linda Magner, and to my faculty colleagues over many years. Many students, both undergraduate and graduate, listened to some of the ideas expressed herein, and offered not only welcome indications of interest but also cogent suggestions. At the University of Delaware Library, the staff of the remarkably able interlibrary loan office and Susan Davi, responsible for acquisitions, have worked miracles, permitting me to gain access to the wide variety of previous scholarly works needed for a study such as this. Support from the university through two General University Research grants made extensive travel possible, and research funds from the H. Fletcher Brown Chair of Humanities were of great help in acquiring photographs and the permission to reproduce them.

The earliest version of this study was presented in my graduate seminar at the University of Delaware, in the spring of 1999. Public presentations of evolving portions and versions of some of the material included the following: the 6th International Seminar on Jewish Art at the Center for Jewish Art at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem in 1999; the Daniel H. Silberberg Lecture Series at the

The largest part of the book was first drafted while I was Berlin Prize Fellow at the American Academy in Berlin in the fall term in 2004. I am very grateful to all those who patiently listened to my ideas and offered helpful suggestions and criticism. A preliminary version of some of the ideas presented herein was published as “From Ancient to Medieval books: On Reading and Illuminating Manuscripts in the Seventh Century,” in Books and Readers in the Pre-Modern World: Essays in Honor of Harry Gamble, ed. Karl Shuve (Atlanta: SBL Press, 2018), pp. 69–98.

At Cambridge University Press, I am especially grateful to the co-editors of the series on palaeography and codicology in which this book appears, David Ganz and Teresa Webber. Each made extensive and enormously helpful comments, to which I have tried to respond effectively. Such is even more the case with two anonymous and deeply learned readers for the press, whose strong support did not prevent them from pointing out many oversights, errors, and areas needing improvement. Those remaining are my responsibility alone.

My wife Vicky has been a constant support and inspiration throughout the long process of bringing this study to completion. Her patient kindness in listening to my evolving ideas has been remarkable, her requests for clarification enormously beneficial, and her support indispensable.
