

MODERN JEWISH PHILOSOPHY AND THE POLITICS OF DIVINE VIOLENCE

Is commitment to God compatible with modern citizenship? In this book, Daniel H. Weiss provides new readings of four modern Jewish philosophers – Moses Mendelssohn, Hermann Cohen, Franz Rosenzweig, and Walter Benjamin – in light of classical rabbinic accounts of God's sovereignty, divine and human violence, and the embodied human being as the image of God. He demonstrates how classical rabbinic literature is relevant to contemporary political and philosophical debates. Weiss brings to light striking political aspects of the writings of the modern Jewish philosophers, who have often been understood as non-political. In addition, he shows how the four modern thinkers are more radical and more shaped by Jewish tradition than has previously been thought. Taken as a whole, Weiss's book argues for a fundamental rethinking of the relationship between Judaism and politics, the history of Jewish thought, and the ethical and political dynamics of the broader Western philosophical tradition.

DANIEL H. WEISS is Polonsky-Coexist Senior Lecturer in Jewish Studies, Faculty of Divinity, University of Cambridge. He is author of Paradox and the Prophets: Hermann Cohen and the Indirect Communication of Religion (2012), among other publications, and co-editor of multiple books, including Scripture and Violence (2020). Actively involved in the Cambridge Interfaith Programme, he is a recent recipient of a Humboldt Research Fellowship for Experienced Researchers.

This project has been immeasurably aided by intellectual exchanges over the years of its gestation. In particular, I would like to thank the following friends and colleagues for the conversations that they shared with me: Omer Michaelis, Ido Harari, Yael Fisch, Ron Margolin, Ori Beck, Yoav Schaefer, George Kohler, Uri Koren, Hanoch Ben-Pazi, Sam Zeitlin, Daniel Herskowitz, Tali Artman-Partock, Susannah Ticciati, Jacob Abolafia, Justin Meggitt, Catherine Pickstock, Esra Özyürek, Kumar Aniket, Giles Waller, Sarah Coakley, David Ford, Bob Gibbs, Agata Bielik-Robson, Yaron Peleg, Gorazd Andrejč, Robbie Duschinsky, Aidan Cottrell-Boyce, Mickey Engel, Sarah Sofer, Sam Brody, Amnon Raz-Krakotzkin, Charles Roddie, Betsy Mesard, Craig Iffland, Omar Shaukat, Reuben Shank, Jacob Goodson, Aaron Gross, Peter Ochs, Asher Biemann, Essam Fahim, Lindsey Taylor-Guthartz, Darren Frey, Justin Jennings, Jacob Rhoads, Holger Zellentin, Jeremy Fogel, Reuven Leigh, and Oz Aloni.

I am also very grateful to the Cambridge Divinity Faculty and Darwin College. They have been my institutional homes while completing this project and have provided support and encouragement in countless different ways. In addition, I thank Simon Goldhill and the Centre for Research in the Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities at Cambridge for an Early Career Fellowship in 2015, which helped this project progress in its early stages.

Parts of Chapter 5 of this book previously appeared as “Walter Benjamin and the Antinomianism of Classical Rabbinic Law,” Bamidbar: Journal for Jewish Thought and Philosophy 4:1 (2015): 56–78. I thank Willi Goetschel and Bamidbar for permission to republish a revised version here. I am also grateful to the Etz Hayyim not-for-profit corporation of Hania, Crete, for permission to use Nikos Stavroulakis’ woodcut for the cover image of this book.

I also thank Beatrice Rehl, Jessie Epstein, Mark Fox, Franklin Jebaraj, and the rest of the team at Cambridge University Press for helping to see this book through to publication in a supportive and professional manner. Likewise, I am grateful for the time and attention of the two anonymous reviewers, who provided very helpful and thoughtful suggestions for further improving my argument and presentation.

I thank my parents, David and Eta, for their continued love and support over the years. Finally, I thank Julia Snyder for her logic, criticism, and heart, all of which were instrumental in helping bring this project to completion.

Note on Transliteration and Translation

Transliteration of Hebrew into Latin characters is according to the general-purpose style guidelines in the SBL Handbook of Style, apart from the transliteration of the letter chet, which I render as ḥ, and of the letter tzadi, which I render as tz.

Translations from the Tanakh are usually drawn from the New Jewish Publication Society (1985) translation, although I have adjusted the translation in some places. New Testament translations are drawn from the New Revised Standard Version.
