

MASS INCARCERATION NATION

The United States imprisons a higher proportion of its population than any other nation. Mass Incarceration Nation offers a novel, in-the-trenches perspective to explain the factors – historical, political, and institutional – that led to the current system of mass imprisonment. The book examines the causes and impacts of mass incarceration on both the political and criminal justice systems. With accessible language and straightforward statistical analysis, former prosecutor turned law professor Jeffrey Bellin provides a formula for reform to return to the low incarceration rates that characterized the United States prior to the 1970s.

JEFFREY BELLIN is the Mills E. Godwin, Jr., Professor at William & Mary Law School.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Thanks to the numerous scholars who offered feedback on either the entire manuscript or specific chapters, including Rachel Barkow, Shima Baughman, Bennett Capers, Andrew Ferguson, Brandon Garrett, Adam Gershowitz, Ryken Grattet, Ben Grunwald, Carissa Hessick, Laura Heymann, Shon Hopwood, Darrell Jackson, Ben Levin, Sandy Mason, Rebecca Roiphe, David Sklansky, and Chris Slobogin. Alexa Deutsch and Fred Dingley provided invaluable research assistance. Thanks as well to the faculties at William & Mary and Vanderbilt Law School, who helped me fine-tune my ideas in workshops. And thanks to the researchers at the Bureau of Justice Statistics, the Pew Research Center, and elsewhere, who collected and compiled some of the data described in this book. Finally, this book would not be possible without the support of my institution, William & Mary Law School, Dean Ben Spencer, and, more than anything else, my family.
