In post-war Sierra Leone, a range of transitional justice mechanisms were implemented to address experiences of conflict, violence and human rights violations. Much of the research on local transitional justice processes has focused on the work of organizations failing to acknowledge how individual and communal dynamics shape and are shaped by these programs. Drawing on original fieldwork in Sierra Leone, Laura S. Martin moves beyond discussions measuring effectiveness and considers how people navigate their circumstances in conflict and post-conflict societies. Developing the idea of recognized and unrecognized transitional justice processes, Martin uses Fambul Tok as an example of a recognized local transitional justice program and shows how ordinary Sierra Leoneans appropriated Fambul Tok’s agenda for their own purposes. Ultimately, this book highlights the crucial role of agency and the diverse range of actors involved in transitional justice processes. Justice, as Martin powerfully argues, is not something that happens to or for people, but is enacted by individuals and communities.

Laura S. Martin is Assistant Professor at the University of Nottingham and an affiliate at the University of Makeni, Sierra Leone. She has conducted research in Sierra Leone for over ten years and, in 2021, was Co-Investigator on an AHRC project entitled “Performing Arts and Social Violence.” She has been published in numerous journals, including Global Studies Quarterly, Cooperation and Conflict and Third World Quarterly.
African Studies Series

The African Studies series, founded in 1968, is a prestigious series of monographs, general surveys, and textbooks on Africa covering history, political science, anthropology, economics, and ecological and environmental issues. The series seeks to publish work by senior scholars as well as the best new research.

Editorial Board:

David Anderson, The University of Warwick
Carolyn Brown, Rutgers University, New Jersey
Christopher Clapham, University of Cambridge
Richard L. Roberts, Stanford University, California
Leonardo A. Villalón, University of Florida

Other titles in the series are listed at the back of the book.
Navigating Local Transitional Justice

Agency at Work in Post-Conflict Sierra Leone

LAURA S. MARTIN

University of Nottingham
To Mom, Dad and Ian – for everything
Contents

List of Maps .......................... page viii
Acknowledgments ....................... ix

1 Agency in Times of Transitional Justice: Recognized and Unrecognized Mechanisms “at Work” ........................... 1

2 Navigating Violence, Peace and Justice: Conflict and Post-Conflict Experiences in Sierra Leone ............................. 32

3 Deconstructing Fambul Tok’s Discourse and Practice: The Local, Ownership and Participation ......................... 68

4 Participant Experiences with Fambul Tok’s Program: Interpretation, Appropriation and Agency ....................... 96

5 Unrecognized Mechanisms, Normality and Everyday Realities in Transition .................................................. 134

6 Activating Justice ......................... 158

Appendix A: Informant Interview List .............................. 169

References ................................ 174

Index ...................................... 193
Maps

1.1 Sierra Leone district map  page 25
1.2 Bombali Chieftaincy map 26
Acknowledgments

Fambul Tok often used the motto “The tree bends, but it does not break.” This aptly reflects my decade-long journey leading to the publication of this book, spanning three continents and endless gratitude to family and friends. I started doing research on Fambul Tok during my masters in 2012 and I have not looked back. Neither this research (nor my sanity) would exist without the support of my nearest and dearest fambul spanning three continents. In Sierra Leone, I am especially grateful to Joseph M. Kargbo and Abu Foday, who have been a constant source of support and helped me navigate research in my very early days to present. Words do not do your support justice. A particular shout-out to the Makeni and Freetown Fambul Tok offices, who graciously hosted me for months on end and took me on their travels, as well as the many communities in Bombali District who hosted me and always showed patience with my endless questions. A special thanks to John Caulker for your support. I would also like to thank other Salone support structures foundational to my research over the years, including James Turay, Aruna Bangura, all my Oxford (SL) colleagues, friends and colleagues at the University of Makeni, Jess Marah-Jones, Aisha Ibrahim, Stella Kanu and Juliet Fornah. To Anthony Mansaray, for our lengthy debates, and the never-ending adventure. Lastly, a very, very special thanks to Simeon Koroma, my close friend, colleague and work partner: Our conversations have been invaluable to all of my research – I am eternally grateful.

To my (now global) crew, from PhD to present: Gerhard Anders and Andy Aydin-Aitchison for their fantastic supervision (and patience). The Edinburgh friends who supported me through so much: Sissela Matzner, Michelle Hay, Neil and Catherine Henry, Tobey Berriault, Rebekah Thompson, as well as Anne Bouleanu and Lewis Wilcox who supported from near and far. Monica Skaten, I could never have done it without you. To the one and only boss lady, Michell Chresfield, your (COVID) support while writing this was invaluable and finally, to Sayra van den Berg, my plutonic life partner and everlasting moral support.
Acknowledgments

A special thank you to friends and colleagues who read drafts of this monograph and helped navigate the publishing process, particularly Gabrielle Lynch, Kieran Mitton, Susan Shepler and Luisa Enria. Other special thanks to colleagues (and friends) for your helpful discussions and guidance over the years: Stephen Forcer, Susan Fitzmaurice, Jelena Obradovic-Wochnik, Paul Jackson, Nick Lemay-Hebert, Roger Mac Ginty, Kate Skinner, Nic Cheeseman, Rebekka Friedman, Izuu Nwankwo and Dan Hammett.

Earlier versions of a few chapters have been published elsewhere. Portions of Chapter 3 were published in “Deconstructing the Local in Peacebuilding Practice: Representations and Realities of Fambul Tok in Sierra Leone,” Third World Quarterly 42:2 (2021), 385–401, and an earlier version of Chapter 5 was published as “Practicing Normality: An Examination of Unrecognizable Transitional Justice Mechanisms in Sierra Leone,” Journal of Intervention and Statebuilding 10:3 (2016), 400–418.

Lastly, to my original fambul: Bob, Nancy and Ian Martin, to whom this book is dedicated. I would not be where I am without your encouragement to invest in my passions. Your constant and unwavering support has (quite literally) meant the world.